Stoner waives hearing

BLOOMFIELD — Timothy Stoner, 19, charged with the armed robbery of a Dudley couple on June 18, waived a preliminary hearing in Magistrate Court Thursday and was bound over by Judge Jimmie Trammell to appear Aug. 20 in Stoddard County Circuit Court.

The charge was filed in connection with the robbery of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Harrison at their home on Dudley Route One -- the second time the family was robbed in less than a month.

The Stoddard County Sheriff's Department related that the Harrisons said two white males came to the door of the home and asked for some gas. When Harrison went out to get the gas, a third man pulled a gun and the three handcuffed both him and his wife.

Taken in the robbery was a 1975 model car and about $200 in cash.

Stoner and another Stoddard County man, Roe Harold Lance, 31, were objects of an areawide manhunt before being taken into custody.

Lance has also been charged in the robbery.

Jury acquits Joan Little

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A jury of six whites and six blacks acquitted Joan Little of all charges today in the icepick stabbing of her white jailer.

The panel deliberated less than an hour and a half before returning its verdict in the case of the 21-year-old black woman who said she stabbed Clarence Alligood, 62, to defend herself during a sexual attack.

The state had charged Miss Little with killing Alligood in an attempt to escape from the Beaufort County Jail in Washington, N.C., where she was being held while appealing a breaking and entering conviction.

Miss Little sat quietly at the defense table and showed little emotion as jury foreman Mark Nielsen read the verdict.

It was issued 1 hour and 18 minutes after Wake Superior Court Judge Hamilton Hobgood told jurors that they would be the "sole judges" of the truth in the case.

He gave the panel three choices in reaching a verdict: guilty of second-degree murder with a maximum penalty of life imprisonment; guilty of manslaughter with a penalty of four months to 20 years imprisonment, or innocent on all charges.

Hobgood told the jurors that the state had presented a case based on circumstantial evidence because there was no eyewitness to the killing. But he said circumstantial evidence is a recognized legal concept to be considered in deliberations.

He said Miss Little must be presumed innocent, however, unless the state had proved her guilt beyond reasonable doubt.

Wake County Dist. Atty. Burley Mitchell, who took jurisdiction over the case when the trial was transferred here, said Thursday he would drop the charges against Miss Little if the jury cannot reach a unanimous decision.

He later said he would consult with Beaufort County Dist. Atty. William Griffin before making that decision. Griffin said he would consider how the jury split before deciding whether to prosecute a second time.

Alligood was found stabbed to death in Miss Little's cell at the jail in Washington, N.C., last Aug. 27. He was naked from the waist down.

Miss Little testified that Alligood came to her cell in the middle of the night, threatened her with an ice pick and forced her to perform oral sex on him. She said she took the ice pick away from him in a struggle and stabbed him to fend him off, then fled for her life.

In closing arguments Thursday, chief defense counsel Jerry Paul characterized Miss Little as an instrument for attaining justice for black women. He said he felt God had called him into the case.

2 injured in area accidents

Two persons received minor injuries in separate traffic accidents on area roads Thursday, the highway patrol reported today.

A Cape Girardeau man was injured in a single-vehicle accident at 4;15 p.m. on Route V two miles west of the Oriole community in Cape Girardeau.

The accident occurred when a westbound pickup truck driven by Monroe Richardson, 45, of Cape Girardeau ran off the road on a curve and overturned in a creek.

Sanitarian tells court
Rats not real problem

BLOOMFIELD--A number of rats are living along Highway 25 between Dexter and Bernie, but investigation has determined that they present no real problem, Gilbert Taylor, environmental sanitarian for the Missouri Division of Health told the Stoddard County Court Thursday.

He said the field rats could be a potential health and agricultural problem, but pose no problem either now or in the foreseeable future.

" These are not regular rats, they're field rats," Taylor said. "They don't go into houses or bother people in houses. It's not their natural habitat and it's not their way."

County Clerk John Marvin Capps said the only complaint he has received was from an editor of a Dexter newspaper.

Associate Judge Jack Ward of Bloomfield Route One commented, "I imagine they've been there for years. They've got plenty of cover and good food."

The area where the rats have been reported is between the highway and railroad tracks--an area which has not been kept up, over the years, allowing brush and undergrowth to accumulate and providing excellent cover for the small rats.

Ward pointed out that even the people who live in the area have never complained about the rats. "Everybody has a rat problem to a certain extent," he said.

"From what we can determine, the field rats are no problem," Taylor said. "They

Ford to veto extension of oil price controls

VAIL, Colo. (AP) — Calling the nation's energy problem a "giant puzzle," President Ford said today he will veto an extension of price controls on domestic oil and promised to remove his $2-a-barrel tariff on imported oil if Congress sustains the veto.

The President said the twin actions would increase the price of petroleum products only a few cents a gallon, "contrary to what others have predicted."

"Tough decisions are needed now," Ford said in remarks prepared for a Vail symposium on energy and the environment. "We're running out of time."

He said his program is needed to increase domestic oil prices gradually, thus forcing energy conservation, stimulating domestic production and reducing U.S. dependence on imported petroleum.

The President's talk was scheduled before an estimated 1,000 persons at a mountaintop restaurant reached only by cable-lift gondola. Ford also was to answer questions submitted in writing by delegates and selected in advance by a symposium committee.

"The on-again, off-again congressional approach to energy is hazardous, expensive and frightening," Ford told the delegates. He urged Congress to end its months-long battle with the White House on energy policy.

Ford also declared the nation must reduce its dependence on oil and gas for energy and use its technology over the next 25 to 50 years to develop alternate sources, such as solar energy.

He said the safe and environmentally sound tapping of the nation's vast coal reserves is essential.

"The nation's capacity to convert coal into clean, gaseous and liquid fuel can and must be developed," he told the audience of Westerners, whose states harbor nearly half of U.S. coal reserves.

Current oil price controls, which limit the price of 60 per cent of domestically produced oil to $5.25 a barrel, are scheduled to expire Aug. 31. Congress voted to extend the controls six months, and it plans to send the legislation to the White House late this month.

Anticipating a Ford veto, the House has scheduled a veto override attempt for early September.

Exam ordered for sodomy suspect

NEW MADRID — Truman Zook, 26, of New Madrid was arraigned Thursday in Magistrate Court on charges of sodomy and child molestation for allegedly molesting a 4-year- old neighbor girl Tuesday night.

According to a sheriff's deputy, the alleged offense occurred about 8:30 p.m. at Zook's mobile home in Cabana Courts.

At the request of Zook's attorney, Judge John R. Bailey ordered that Zook be transferred to Fulton State Hospital for a mental examination. Bond for Zook was set at $5,000.

Budget shows deficit spending

CHARLESTON — The 1975-76 operating budget for the Charleston R-1 School District, approved Thursday night by the board of education, shows deficit spending of about $103,000 due to the loss of a $306,000 federal grant.

The grant had been requested under the provision of the Emergency School Aid Act, but the district was notified by the Department of Health Education and Welfare that the grant would not be funded because of the district was not in compliance with HEW guidelines.

Estimated receipts for this year's budget were listed at $2,696,458, while estimated expenditures total $2,855,504. These amounts, however, do not include funds from other federal programs and about $56,000 in federal carryover money from last year.

Supt. Charles Rorex aid the loss of the $36,000 made it necessary to reduce the teaching staff and reduce the salary of some teacher aides.

An elementary counselor, career counselor, social worker, 15 teacher aides at the Hearnes Elementary School and two teacher aides at the high school have been cut from the staff.

Yearly salaries for teacher-aides in special education classes were reduced from $3,042 to $2,000, and one special education class at the high school has been dropped.

In addition, the district has relinquished its lease on a mobile unit at the high school, transferred a reading consultant to the Title I Program and dismissed one secretary in the administration office.

Reasons listed by HEW for the district's failure to meet federal guidelines were in three areas. One was the percentage of black teachers in special education classes compared to percentage of black teachers in the district.

The second area in which the district failed to meet guidelines was in the placement of some special education classes in mobile units, separate from regular school buildings. HEW wanted special education classes moved into buildings and some regular classes moved into the mobile units.

Ability grouping procedures used for grades six through 12 were included in the third area the district failed to meet

Council authorizes sale of $2.6 million in bonds

BLOOMFIELD—The City Council Thursday night passed an ordinance authorizing the sale of $2.6 million in industrial revenue bonds to help finance the construction of a new building to house Southern Clay Inc., manufacturers of clay base products.

Residents of Bloomfield overwhelmingly approved the bond issue by casting 275 votes in favor and only 14 against in a Feb. 6 special election.

The new plant will be located in the Avert community northeast of Bloomfield and will provide an estimated 75 additional jobs to area residents with an annual payroll of about $600,000.

Work on the plant has already been started.

The City Council Monday night passed a resolution declaring that if federally subsidized flood insurance is approved for the city, the ordinances passed by the council in regard to the insurance would be enforced.

Mayor Glen Ayers said the resolution was necessary to have the city approved for the insurance.

The council also decided to look into the possibility of building a bridge on Depot Road. Lee Jarrells of Bloomfield submitted a bid of $1,250 to build the bridge, and the county will reportedly pay half the cost.

The council voted to proceed on the project by contacting township officials to begin working out details.

Thieves are stocking up

Tools, a tape player, radio, television sets and fishing equipment have been reported stolen, police said today.

An electric drill valued at $24 and a tool box containing a 91-piece socket wrench set worth $63 were taken from a pickup truck belonging to Robert Gardner, 1605 E. Kathleen Ave.

The theft occurred between 12:20 and 12:30 p.m. Thursday in the Malone & Hyde, Inc. parking lot.

Nancy Fields of Charleston Route One told police that a citizens band radio was taken from her car while it was parked in the Kingway Plaza Mall parking lot between 10:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. Thursday.

She said the radio was valued at $158.

Terry Trucks, 528 S. New Madrid St., told police a tape player valued at $50 was taken from his car while it was parked at Kingsway Plaza Mall between 5 and 9 p.m. Wednesday.

Board of appeals completes hearings

BLOOMFIELD — Only three persons appeared before the Stoddard County Board of Equalization, which met Monday as a board of appeals, and they were mainly seeking information rather than objecting to the assessment on their land, according to County Clerk John Marvin Capps.

Only one person objected to his assessment, and that case is being looked into, Capps said.

Capps added that no more public hearings will be held since no one has requested any.

County court Associate Judge Jack Ward of Bloomfield Route One expressed the hope Thursday that, now that the tax figures are all in, the towns and school districts will comply with state law requiring them to reduce their tax rates when assessments increase by 10 per cent or more from one year to the next.

Assessments in Stoddard County have been increased 11.93 per cent over 1974.

Capps has sent out more than 30 letters to all political subdivisions in the county informing them of the increase in assessments and asking them to comply with the law, a copy of which he included with each letter.

The county has no power to make towns or school districts comply with the law. If they do not comply, the only way a citizen can have his tax rate reduced is through court action. If he is successful, the reduction will affect only that person and only for that year.

Capps said such an arrangement may be all right for railroads, utilities or large landowners, but the common person rarely has the money or knowledge to take the necessary action.

Assessments in Stoddard County have been increased 11.93 per cent over 1974.

Capps has sent out more than 30 letters to all political subdivisions in the county informing them of the increase in assessments and asking them to comply with the law, a copy of which he included with each letter.

The county has no power to make towns or school districts comply with the law. If they do not comply, the only way a citizen can have his tax rate reduced is through court action. If he is successful, the reduction will affect only that person and only for that year.

Capps said such an arrangement may be all right for railroads, utilities or large landowners, but the common person rarely has the money or knowledge to take the necessary action.

Clinic scheduled Sept. 4

BENTON — A diagnostic team sponsored by the Bureau of Maternal and Child Health in the Missouri Division of Health, will visit Scott County Sept. 4 for the purpose of conducting a diagnostic and evaluation clinic for young children with communication disorders.

The team will be present from 8:30 a.m. till noon and to 4 p.m. at the Scott County Health Center in Benton.

The efforts of the team will be aimed at two particular groups of children: preschool children with suspected communication disorders and mentally retarded children not in school.

The vital element of the program is early detection of communication disorders in the young child. The objective is the avoidance of permanent crippling effects to the child's emotional, social and physical development.

The team consists of a pediatrician, psychologist, speech consultant, speech pathologist and local public health nurses.

Services to be offered at the clinic include medical examination, speech, language, hearing and psychological examinations.

Following the clinic evaluations, the findings and recommendations will be assessed by the team. Final diagnosis and recommendations will then be forwarded to the local public health nurses to arrange follow-up treatment.

Arrangements for te evaluation clinic are being made by the Scott County Health Unit and Mrs. Jeannine Aldridge, coordinator of speech and hearing programs for the Missouri Division of Health at Jefferson City, with approval of Scott County physicians.

Working closely with the Scott County Health Unit to insure the success of the diagnostic clinic are the following: Mrs. Mary Shuffit, secretary, Sikeston, and Mrs. Myrtse Greer of Morley.

Anyone wishing to obtain further information may contact Mrs. Berneal Carroll at Morley or Mrs. Rachel Sitzes of Sikeston public health nurses for the Scott County Health Unit.

NEW SURGE IN INFLATION

The June jump in consumer prices, to a 9.6 per cent annual rate, "is a warning that the menace of inflation is still very much with us," according to recent congressional testimony by Arthur Burns, Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

Dr. Burns has reason to be concerned. Although there was a b rief decrease in the rate of inflation as the nation sank into the 1974-75 recession, now that recovery has apparently begun, the rate is climbing again, and from a higher base than ever before. This seems to be true of each recession recovery. The inflation rate never falls to its previous low, and each time climbs above its previous high.

Agricultural commodity prices have been rising recently on a broad front. The rise has been particularly pronounced since the announcement of the new, massive grain sales to the Soviet Union. Ironically, since the Administration forced the cancellation of some grain sales to the Soviets last fall, grain prices tumbled and the canny Russians seem to have made their most recent purchases at the virtual bottom of the market. This will give a new, upward impetus to food prices. And manufacturers, who have been awaiting an excuse to raise their own prices anew, now seem to have it.

Dr. Burns is known to fear inflation as a major threat to the fabric of our society, because of its possible revolutionary impact upon those groups whose standard of living is destroyed by it. The rich have ways of protecting themselves; the less affluent find their savings and life insurance eroded and the purchasing power of their incomes steadily diminished; the poor find that rising food prices make it impossible even to feed their families adequately.

Inflation is a monster whose destructive appetite should never be underestimated. We are glad to have a Federal Reserve Chairman who recognizes the danger and who has pledged to combat it as best he can. We cannot say as much for most politicians.

Most Americans are becoming concerned with the financial stability of our country because Congress, in particular, cuts no programs and curtails no government activities. In fact, they dream up new and incredible ways to pour more and more money and resources down the ratholes of the world, and give themselves raises, more benefits, fringes and emoluents. Most Congressmen and their staffs are making several times as much as they could in private life.

These elected officials have pushed legislation that will bring the federal deficit from $70 billion to $100 billion higher this fiscal year, but haven't told the people the truth. Few of them have had the integrity to tell the people what is coming.

Our government is out of control, moving toward financial crisis and more control of the people. The efforts of too many in our government are directed toward the collectivation of our economy-- some call it Socialism -- but those responsible for it should be punished.

Do you realize that it took 186 years for the federal budget to reach $100 billion and that now these plunderers may produce a deficit bigger than that this year? What does a $100 billion deficit mean in terms of the economy? Out-of-hand inflation, price controls, wage control, people controls. More and more government borrowing which will impair the ability of private business to get needed financing to provide more jobs.

If the situation gets worse, the majority of our leaders will try to cover up the truth by blaming most of it on the Arabs.

What's the answer?

You don't have to be a college grad or a money-expert to know. Anybody who works for a living knows that we have to drastically reduce the size and scope of government. Government, local and national, is now usurping almost half of what we produce. We must pay our way and only on what we can afford; get back to a free and competitive market. We must take "the cure." But the real question is: are we honest enough to do it?

EQUAL RIGHTS FOR PARENTS

Students have rights. Teachers have rights. Now the rights of parents have been officially recognized in one city, reports Education U.S.A. newsletter.

They are contained in a "Parents Bill of Rights and Responsiblities" adopted by the Philadelphia Home and School Council and the Parents Union of Philadelphia and approved by the school board. Among the 15 rights granted parents are:

To be treated with courtesy by the school staff. To be respected as individuals regardless of race, economic status, sex or age. To be informed of school policies and decisions, as well as avenues for changing policies and appealing decisions. To be allowed to inspect their child's records and to remove or correct any "false or misleading statements."

Among parent's responsibilities are:

To strive to prepare the child emotionally and socially to make him receptive to learning and discipline. To try to have the child attend school regularly and on time, and to help the child develop proper study habits.

PRIVATE COLLEGES ARE LOOKING UP

Parents of college-bound youths face a 10-per cent climb in tuition this fall. Even so, early indications are that the nation's private institutions of higher learning will not be lacking for students.

A recently completed survey of 607 independent colleges and universities shows that enrollment applications are ahead of last year for 55 per cent of the schools; another 17 per cent are at least even.

The figures were releasef by the National Council of Independent Colleges and Universities, an affiliate of the Washington-based Association of American Colleges (AAC).

The figures are a continuation of last fall's uptrend, which saw both the private and public sectors sharing a record 10-million enrollment. This year, however, the increase may not be shared by the public institutions. As many as 200,000 vacancies are predicted for fall by the American Association of State Colleges and Universities.

The increasing interest in independent colleges is occurring even though the average cost of attendance this fall, including tuition, room, board, books, transportation and personal expenses, will reach $4,391.

Such cost, together with current economic conditions, could be expected to channel more young people into public universities and vocational training, but this apparently won't be the case.

Commenting on the survey results, AAC president Dr. Frederick Ness cited a number of factors responsible. One is the growing number of states offering programs ofsome kind to offset the tuition gap between independent and state institutions, thus enabling students to have more freedom of choice. States having student grant programs have risen to 40, which represents a doubling during the past eight years.

Ness also credits federal programs of student aid with "making possible a financial package of state and federal assistance which, together with aid offered by the schools themselves, keeps the doors of independent colleges open to disadvantaged and middle-income students."

Also, the schools are tailoring programs to attract and accommodate new constituencies, such as housewives and working adults. Part-time enrollment and weekend classwork is now commonplace. According to the U.S. Office of Education, adults now account for nearly 50 per cent of the nation's total college enrollment.

In sum, fears that the nation's private schools were in danger of going under from the blows of recession and rising costs appear to have been unfounded. Instead, they seem to be thriving.

SHORT MEMORIES

The public's memory is short. This accounts for the widespread astonishment at the extent and suddenness of energy shortages. In reality, they have been building for years into an explosive situation. The flashpoint was reached with thd cutoff of Middle East oil.

An interview of a U.S. News & World Report editor with Dr. Dixy Lee Ray, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, illustrates why an ultimate energy crisis was inevitable in this country. During the interview, Dr. Ray explained how, back in 1971, due to a U.S. Supreme Court decision relative to environmental restrictions, the AEC "...stopped licensing any nuclear plants at all for 17 months. We didn't issue permits for construction or operation during that period. Because of this hiatus, everything sort of came to a standstill...." Dr. Ray then described the problems of utility companies. Uncertainty with respect to regulations governing such things as health, safety, the environment, taxes and pollution control systems prevented them from going ahead. Disregarded were many of the facts about nuclear energy plants, from their accident-free record to waste disposal. On the latter point, Dr. Ray observed that by the year 2000 we may have something like 1,000 nuclear power plants in operation. The total volume of waste from those plants, assuming that it is solidified, could easily be stacked up on a tennis court.

At any rate, the energy shortage of today has arrived in all forms with a vengeance, and there is no mystery about it. The only mystery is how short the public memory has proven to be. Forgotten are the obstructive tactics--environmental, regulatory and taxwise--thatfor years slowed the energy industries. The 17-month hiatus in nuclear plant licensing was typical of the times. The objective now should be to move ahead at flank speed to close the breach in the energy ramparts of the United States.

XXX

IS THIS EXECUTIVE REALLY NECESSARY?

Nonproducing executives may be costing U.S. industry more than obsolete equipment. Yet at a time when business is striving to cut costs and increase productivity, many firms ignore the drag of highly paid executives who should never have been placed in their jobs.

Cushing and Cushing, a Los Angeles consulting firm, estimates that more than 15 per cent of the executives currently at work in American industry are unqualified for their jobs. By comparison, the latest mcGraw-Hill survey of capital obsolescence shows that management considers only about 11 per cent of its plant and equipment to be unproductive and obsolete.

When the Cushing estimate is projected on the Census Bureau's salary totals for the nearly nine million executives in the United States, the annual cost of the obsolete-managerial talent comes to a staggering $16 billion. That doesn't include bonuses, pensions and other fringe benefits normally paid to executives.

Why is it that so many executives hold jobs they cannot perform?

There are any number of reasons, but in fast-growing companies, especially, individuals are often promoted from positions for which they were qualified into succeedingly higher jobs for which they are less and less qualified (the Peter Principle).

Apparently the most frequent way a company has of getting rid of an incompetent executive is by palming him off to another company.

As to why a company would recruit an incompetent executive from another firm, the reason, says Bryant Cushing, is the common tendency of people, including top management, to assume that executives who have held prestigious jobs with prestigious firms must be highly competent—or they wouldn't have held the jobs, would they?

To avoid such an elementary blunder, companies must be willing to investigate executive candidates with greater care before hiring them, rather than relying on name, reputation or previous position.

"It's a question of comparing reality with resumes by asking the right people the right questions," says Cushing. And the "right people" include not only a candidate's former superiors but his peers and subordinates.

LOOKING AHEAD

Shortages may create a seller's market, but they in no way relieve a merchant of the necessity of retaining a competitive edge if he wishes to prosper in the years ahead. This means that if he wants to keep his old customers and attract new ones to build merchandising volume, he must continue to pursue business-building promotional policies.

The Sun-News of Myrtle Beach, South Carolina has featured a story about a successful merchant in that area. In an interview, the merchant, who owns four supermarkets, discussed promotion and explained why he is convinced that trading stamps today are a retailer's most profitable promotion. He observed, "Some people say that stamps are losing their appeal, but I disagree....they may be more appealing now than they ever have been. Stamps increase the value of the consumer's shopping dollar and in today's market that's very important." The South Carolina retailer attributes a 40 percent increase in his business over the past 12 months to the giving of stamps. In spite of rising wholesale prices, he has not had to raise his own retail prices because of the increase in his volume of business.

In the short run, there may be more customers than goods. But in the U.S. competitive enterprise system, shortages have never been chronic. Those merchants who show the most appreciation for customer patronage will be the most successful tomorrow.

In A Nuclear Age – The Responsibility Of Power.

America's Secretary of Defense is the diametric opposite of the image of the trigger-happy militarist painted by our nation's enemies, critics and virtually all literaturs. Secretary Schlesigner is a profound and erudite scholar. I asked him – what of detente? Here is his answer written exclusively for this column.

By James R. Schlesinger
Secretary of Defense

WASHINGTON - Throughout our history we Americans have viewed military power ambivalenty, believeing that stability, not force, should characterize the relations between nations. Indeed, it remains our hope that nations can achieve their goals through cooperation rather than conflict. But we must not substitute illusion for hope. This world is neither one from which we can retreat, nor an abode we find particularly hospitable. Lacking the laws and institutions that shape the life of an individual nation, the external world has created far too many opportunities for the unrestrained use and abuse of power. Until the nations of the world agree upon and accept common purposes and institutions, it will be necessary for this nation to retain the instruments of military power for the preservation of the values it holds dear.

To become more precise about the existing distribution of world power, two nations, the United States and the Soviet Union, are preeminent. In a military sense, the world retains most of the trappings of bipolarity. Given that reality, the United States remains the indispensable counterweight to the unfettered exercise by the Soviet Union of its very considerable strength.

Americans have not been altogether happy with this development in terms of power and responsibility. They have been equivocal about American preeminence -- and the responsibilities such a position entails. Nevertheless, whether we are resigned to or cheerfully embrace these responsibilities, there is today no adequate substitute for the United States as the mainstay and maintainer of the community of free states.

In our relations with the other superpower we pursue both stability and a relaxation of tension. But given ideological differences and the contrast between our own social order and that of the Soviets, the reduction of tension cannot be quickly transformed into the elimination of tension.

The equation of power retains its ultimate significance. And it will do so until such time as the Soviet Union accepts the permanence and legitimacy of Western social order. When the Soviet Union ceases to regard peaceful coexistence – Lenin's phrase invariably employed in place of "detente" -- as something more than an altered form of the ideological struggle and a different phase of the class war, we may ultimately reach a common acceptance of the meaning of international stability. Until such time, however, power will remain the ultimate arbiter of international developments and the power balance will be essential to the preservation of stability. Detente willby necessity remain undergirded by an equilibrium of force.

Such are the realities which for the indefinite future will establish the framework for America's role. To a greater or lesser extent we can fail in our obligations, but it is not within our power to alter the hard cold facts.

Yet, we must also recognize that the psychological setting has altered since the United States inherited the responsibilities in the wake of World War II. Americans are no longer as enthusiastic about their international role as they were at the time of the Marshall Plan, or the founding of NATO, or the response to Sputnik, or the Kennedy inaugural address. Other states outside the Communist orbit no longer treat American leadership with acclaim. Familiarity has led them to become, at least, more restless, bored or unappreciative. So as we proceed on our course, we do so with less zest, with less of a crusading impulse -- while recognizing that the task has become, if anything, more difficult.

For some time the country has to all appearances been in flux. The changes in attitude reflect a widespread failure of moral stamina in Western societies as much as the specific disputes within this country over the Vietnam war. But I use the world "appearances" advisedly in order to stress the surface aspect of such developments. Beneath the surface there remains in the United States a deep-seated solidity. Despite the corrosive effects of the events of the last decade, our American society remains a highly resilient one -- perhaps preeminently so among the nations of the world.

But this deeper solidity can readily remain undiscerned. If there is one thing about the American society, it is a tendency to overdramatize. Headlines puffing the crisis of the week and the compression of reality in TV summaries serve to titillate the reader or the viewer. There is typically a quest for novelty.

There is, however, only limited opportunity for novelty in responsible policy towards the international order (or the domestic social framework). The role of the United States is to a large degree shaped by external forces to which we may react -- or fail to react. The zest for our international role may well have diminished, but that will not permit us to abandon our burdens. What Mr. Dooley said with respect to divorce on Ar-rchey Road many years ago has a certain relevancy today to America's continuing foreign involvement:

"Up here whin a married couple get to th' pint where tis impossibel f'r thim to go on living' together they go on livin' together."

I have every confidence that the years ahead will bring a restoration of moral stamina and an abiding trust in the values of Western citivilzation. The underlying strength and resiliency of this society is sufficient to the the task. We shall not fail, for if we should fail the inevitable drift would make the words of William Butler Yeats depressingly relevant to our condition:

"Things fall apart; the centre cannot hold;

"Mere anarchy is loosed upon the world, . . .

"The best lack all conviction, while the worse

"Are full of passionate intensity."

We ought not allow this grim vision to materialize.

Washington Merry-Go-Round
By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON - In the smoke-filled backrooms of Washington, Democratic party leaders are scheming and dreaming about the 1976 presidential race.

We have interviewed dozens of them and can report their sometimes surprising conclusions:

-- The party bosses have all but given up hope that Senator Ted Kennedy will run. Our political sources say Kennedy has quietly assured his intimate advisors and financial backers that he will not change his mind. He has told them they are free to help the candidates of their choice.

-- Senator Henry Jackson, blessed with bulging campaign coffers and labor backing, appeals to middle-class voters and appears to be the next most formidable candidate. But this could change overnight. The old curmudgeon of labor, AFL-CIO chief George Meany, has lost his ardor for Jackson, according to our sources, and is casting a flirtatious eye at Indiana Senator Birch Bayh.

-- Bayh, meanwhile, has signed up Mike Feldman, a power in the Kennedy and McGovern camps, as his financial manager and is planning to test his presidential possibilities in the New Hampshire and Massachusetts primaries. If he makes a good showing, he will enter the Florida primary to see how well he can do in a southern state. Should he pick up George Meany's backing along the way; Bayh's political fortunes should soar.

-- Many of the Democratic leaders privately feel the man they need to give a new look to their party is Idaho's Senator Frank Church. He has a youthful appearance, yet at the same time, he is an experienced national leader. He has a reputation for decency and integrity. But Church has refused to permit even his closet friends to push his candidacy as long as he is heading the Senate's probe of the CIA. He doesn't want to appear as if he is investigating the CIA for political purposes, he has told intimates. The CIA probe will not be completed until February, at the earliest, and some of Church's supporters, therefore, have begun to stray.

-- Senator Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, like Henry Jackson, is shooting for conservative, middle-of-the- road support. His chances, the backroom pols feel, will increase as Jackson slips.

-- Behind closed doors, none of the party leaders regard Alabama's Governor George Wallace seriously, except as a spoiler. The extent of Wallace's physical incapacity, say our sources, has yet to be revealed. He has to be propped up to watch television or make a speech. When the public learns the full story, the politicans believe, Wallace will be doomed. He will be unable to match the performance of Franklin Roosevelt, who won elections in a wheelchair. Roosevelt had to deal only with radio. Wallace, our sources point out, would find it impossible to hide his poor health from the searching television cameras.

-- Liberal Democratic leaders have a soft spot for two "people's candidates," Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona and former Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma. Udall, especially, is regarded as an ideal candidate, with his Lincolnesque looks and his Will Rogers sense of humor. The politicians have concluded, however, that neither of them can rally the support they need. Walking among the people, it is felt, is still not the way to win national elections.

CONFLICT OF INTEREST: Hard-working Chairman Ray Garrett of the Securities and Exchange Commission prides himself on how his agency has recovered from the bad old days when it was run by the Watergate crowd.

But we have now caught Garrett in an apparent conflict of interest, with Watergate overtones. He jumped into a $35 million court case on the side of the giant First Boston investment firm. Yet he neglected to fell his fellow commissioners that he had once collected a huge law fee from First Boston.

The story is complex. It began in 1969 with an attempt by Chris-Craft to take over Piper Aircraft. This led to exhaustive litigation. The initial court decision showed that Chris-Craft had been the victim of SEC violations.

Chris-Craft filed a lawsuit against the alleged violators, among which was First Boston. The SEC entered the case "a friend of the court" on Chris-Craft's side. The record shows that Garrett at first supported the SEC position in favor of Chris-Craft and against First Boston.

Four months ago, a federal appellate court finally awarded Chris-Craft $25 million in damages and another $10 million in interest. This was a blow to First Boston, which might get stuck with paying most of the $35 million.

So First Boston sent its lawyers to Washington for a private conference with Garrett. He informed his fellow commissioners of the meeting, but he never mentioned that he had been paid a handsome fee by First Boston four years ago in a $50 million utility company stock issue.

Garrett also failed to notify Chris-Craft that he had met with their adversaries in the case. Nor did he invite Chris-Craft to present its side of the case.

Instead, the SEC, with Garrett playing a leading role, backed down from its previsous strong position and supported First Boston's petition for a rehearing. Garrett's new view was not accepted by the appellate court, but the court record is now headed for the Supreme Court, with no mention that the powerful SEC chairman might have a conflict of interest.

To Garrett's credit, he spoke to us frankly about his past association with First Boston. He said his lucrative work for First Boston in 1971 had completely slipped his mind. It was a one-shot thing, "a hello, good-bye situation," he said.

First Boston's president, Paul Miller, was also unaware of Garrett's previous role with his company. He was certain the company's lawyers also had no knowledge of it when they met with Garrett, Miller added.

A Chris-Craft spokesman said his firm had not been told of the ex parte meeting between Garrett and First Boston. He refused to comment on the case.

These elected officials have pushed legislation that will bring the federal deficit from $70 billion to $100 billion higher this fiscal year, but haven't told the people the truth. Few of them have had the integrity to tell the people what is coming.

Our government is out of control, moving toward financial crisis and more control of the people. The efforts of too many in our government are directed toward the collectivation of our economy-- some call it Socialism -- but those responsible for it should be punished.

Do you realize that it took 186 years for the federal budget to reach $100 billion and that now these plunderers may produce a deficit bigger than that this year? What does a $100 billion deficit mean in terms of the economy? Out-of-hand inflation, price controls, wage control, people controls. More and more government borrowing which will impair the ability of private business to get needed financing to provide more jobs.

If the situation gets worse, the majority of our leaders will try to cover up the truth by blaming most of it on the Arabs.

What's the answer?

You don't have to be a college grad or a money-expert to know. Anybody who works for a living knows that we have to drastically reduce the size and scope of government. Government, local and national, is now usurping almost half of what we produce. We must pay our way and only on what we can afford; get back to a free and competitive market. We must take "the cure." But the real question is: are we honest enough to do it?

EQUAL RIGHTS FOR PARENTS

Students have rights. Teachers have rights. Now the rights of parents have been officially recognized in one city, reports Education U.S.A. newsletter.

They are contained in a "Parents Bill of Rights and Responsiblities" adopted by the Philadelphia Home and School Council and the Parents Union of Philadelphia and approved by the school board. Among the 15 rights granted parents are:

To be treated with courtesy by the school staff. To be respected as individuals regardless of race, economic status, sex or age. To be informed of school policies and decisions, as well as avenues for changing policies and appealing decisions. To be allowed to inspect their child's records and to remove or correct any "false or misleading statements."

Among parent's responsibilities are:

To strive to prepare the child emotionally and socially to make him receptive to learning and discipline. To try to have the child attend school regularly and on time, and to help the child develop proper study habits.

He was a rather undersized freshman at his first college dance, but despite his smallness, he was sure of himself in his own way. He walked over to a beautiful and over sophisticated sorority girl and said, "Pardon me, Miss, may I have this dance?"

She looked down at his small size and lack of a fraternity pin and said, "I'm sorry, but I never dance with a child!"

The freshman bowed deeply and said, "Oh, I'm sorry, I wasn't aware of your condition."

PRIVATE COLLEGES ARE LOOKING UP

Parents of college-bound youths face a 10-per cent climb in tuition this fall. Even so, early indications are that the nation's private institutions of higher learning will not be lacking for students.

A recently completed survey of 607 independent colleges and universities shows that enrollment applications are ahead of last year for 55 per cent of the schools; another 17 per cent are at least even.

The figures were releasef by the National Council of Independent Colleges and Universities, an affiliate of the Washington-based Association of American Colleges (AAC).

The figures are a continuation of last fall's uptrend, which saw both the private and public sectors sharing a record 10-million enrollment. This year, however, the increase may not be shared by the public institutions. As many as 200,000 vacancies are predicted for fall by the American Association of State Colleges and Universities.

The increasing interest in independent colleges is occurring even though the average cost of attendance this fall, including tuition, room, board, books, transportation and personal expenses, will reach $4,391.

Such cost, together with current economic conditions, could be expected to channel more young people into public universities and vocational training, but this apparently won't be the case.

Commenting on the survey results, AAC president Dr. Frederick Ness cited a number of factors responsible. One is the growing number of states offering programs ofsome kind to offset the tuition gap between independent and state institutions, thus enabling students to have more freedom of choice. States having student grant programs have risen to 40, which represents a doubling during the past eight years.

Ness also credits federal programs of student aid with "making possible a financial package of state and federal assistance which, together with aid offered by the schools themselves, keeps the doors of independent colleges open to disadvantaged and middle-income students."

Also, the schools are tailoring programs to attract and accommodate new constituencies, such as housewives and working adults. Part-time enrollment and weekend classwork is now commonplace. According to the U.S. Office of Education, adults now account for nearly 50 per cent of the nation's total college enrollment.

In sum, fears that the nation's private schools were in danger of going under from the blows of recession and rising costs appear to have been unfounded. Instead, they seem to be thriving.

SHORT MEMORIES

The public's memory is short. This accounts for the widespread astonishment at the extent and suddenness of energy shortages. In reality, they have been building for years into an explosive situation. The flashpoint was reached with thd cutoff of Middle East oil.

An interview of a U.S. News & World Report editor with Dr. Dixy Lee Ray, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, illustrates why an ultimate energy crisis was inevitable in this country. During the interview, Dr. Ray explained how, back in 1971, due to a U.S. Supreme Court decision relative to environmental restrictions, the AEC "...stopped licensing any nuclear plants at all for 17 months. We didn't issue permits for construction or operation during that period. Because of this hiatus, everything sort of came to a standstill...." Dr. Ray then described the problems of utility companies. Uncertainty with respect to regulations governing such things as health, safety, the environment, taxes and pollution control systems prevented them from going ahead. Disregarded were many of the facts about nuclear energy plants, from their accident-free record to waste disposal. On the latter point, Dr. Ray observed that by the year 2000 we may have something like 1,000 nuclear power plants in operation. The total volume of waste from those plants, assuming that it is solidified, could easily be stacked up on a tennis court.

At any rate, the energy shortage of today has arrived in all forms with a vengeance, and there is no mystery about it. The only mystery is how short the public memory has proven to be. Forgotten are the obstructive tactics--environmental, regulatory and taxwise--thatfor years slowed the energy industries. The 17-month hiatus in nuclear plant licensing was typical of the times. The objective now should be to move ahead at flank speed to close the breach in the energy ramparts of the United States.

IS THIS EXECUTIVE REALLY NECESSARY?

Nonproducing executives may be costing U.S. industry more than obsolete equipment. Yet at a time when business is striving to cut costs and increase productivity, many firms ignore the drag of highly paid executives who should never have been placed in their jobs.

Cushing and Cushing, a Los Angeles consulting firm, estimates that more than 15 per cent of the executives curreptly at work in American industry are unqualified for their jobs. By comparison, the latest mcGraw-Hill survey of capital obsolescence shows that management considers only about 11 per cent of its plant and equipment to be unproductive and obsolete.

When the Cushing estimate is projected on the Census Bureau's salary totals for the nearly nine million executives in the United States, the annual cost of the obsolete-managerial talent comes to a staggering $16 billion. That doesn't include bonuses, pensions and other fringe benefits normally paid to executives.

Why is it that so many executives hold jobs they cannot perform?

There are any number of reasons, but in fast-growing companies, especially, individuals are often promoted from positions for which they were qualified into succeedingly higher jobs for which they are less and less qualified (the Peter Principle).

Apparently the most frequent way a company has of getting rid of an incompetent executive is by palming him off to another company.

As to why a company would recruit an incompetent executive from another firm, the reason, says Bryant Cushing, is the common tendency of people, including top management, to assume that executives who have held prestigious jobs with prestigious firms must be highly competent—or they wouldn't have held the jobs, would they?

To avoid such an elementary blunder, companies must be willing to investigate executive candidates with greater care before hiring them, rather than relying on name, reputation or previous position.

"It's a question of comparing reality with resumes by asking the right people the right questions," says Cushing. And the "right people" include not only a candidate's former superiors but his peers and subordinates.

LOOKING AHEAD

Shortages may create a seller's market, but they in no way relieve a merchant of the necessity of retaining a competitive edge if he wishes to prosper in the years ahead. This means that if he wants to keep his old customers and attract new ones to build merchandising volume, he must continue to pursue business-building promotional policies.

The Sun-News of Myrtle Beach, South Carolina has featured a story about a successful merchant in that area. In an interview, the merchant, who owns four supermarkets, discussed promotion and explained why he is convinced that trading stamps today are a retailer's most profitable promotion. He observed, "Some people say that stamps are losing their appeal, but I disagree....they may be more appealing now than they ever have been. Stamps increase the value of the consumer's shopping dollar and in today's market that's very important." The South Carolina retailer attributes a 40 percent increase in his business over the past 12 months to the giving of stamps. In spite of rising wholesale prices, he has not had to raise his own retail prices because of the increase in his volume of business.

In the short run, there may be more customers than goods. But in the U.S. competitive enterprise system, shortages have never been chronic. Those merchants who show the most appreciation for customer patronage will be the most successful tomorrow.

Washington Merry-Go-Round
By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON - In the smoke-filled backrooms of Washington, Democratic party leaders are scheming and dreaming about the 1976 presidential race.

We have interviewed dozens of them and can report their sometimes surprising conclusions:

-- The party bosses have all but given up hope that Senator Ted Kennedy will run. Our political sources say Kennedy has quietly assured his intimate advisors and financial backers that he will not change his mind. He has told them they are free to help the candidates of their choice.

-- Senator Henry Jackson, blessed with bulging campaign coffers and labor backing, appeals to middle-class voters and appears to be the next most formidable candidate. But this could change overnight. The old curmudgeon of labor, AFL-CIO chief George Meany, has lost his ardor for Jackson, according to our sources, and is casting a flirtatious eye at Indiana Senator Birch Bayh.

-- Bayh, meanwhile, has signed up Mike Feldman, a power in the Kennedy and McGovern camps, as his financial manager and is planning to test his presidential possibilities in the New Hampshire and Massachusetts primaries. If he makes a good showing, he will enter the Florida primary to see how well he can do in a southern state. Should he pick up George Meany's backing along the way; Bayh's political fortunes should soar.

-- Many of the Democratic leaders privately feel the man they need to give a new look to their party is Idaho's Senator Frank Church. He has a youthful appearance, yet at the same time, he is an experienced national leader. He has a reputation for decency and integrity. But Church has refused to permit even his closet friends to push his candidacy as long as he is heading the Senate's probe of the CIA. He doesn't want to appear as if he is investigating the CIA for political purposes, he has told intimates. The CIA probe will not be completed until February, at the earliest, and some of Church's supporters, therefore, have begun to stray.

-- Senator Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, like Henry Jackson, is shooting for conservative, middle-of-the- road support. His chances, the backroom pols feel, will increase as Jackson slips.

-- Behind closed doors, none of the party leaders regard Alabama's Governor George Wallace seriously, except as a spoiler. The extent of Wallace's physical incapacity, say our sources, has yet to be revealed. He has to be propped up to watch television or make a speech. When the public learns the full story, the politicans believe, Wallace will be doomed. He will be unable to match the performance of Franklin Roosevelt, who won elections in a wheelchair. Roosevelt had to deal only with radio. Wallace, our sources point out, would find it impossible to hide his poor health from the searching television cameras.

-- Liberal Democratic leaders have a soft spot for two "people's candidates," Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona and former Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma. Udall, especially, is regarded as an ideal candidate, with his Lincolnesque looks and his Will Rogers sense of humor. The politicians have concluded, however, that neither of them can rally the support they need. Walking among the people, it is felt, is still not the way to win national elections.

CONFLICT OF INTEREST: Hard-working Chairman Ray Garrett of the Securities and Exchange Commission prides himself on how his agency has recovered from the bad old days when it was run by the Watergate crowd.

But we have now caught Garrett in an apparent conflict of interest, with Watergate overtones. He jumped into a $35 million court case on the side of the giant First Boston investment firm. Yet he neglected to fell his fellow commissioners that he had once collected a huge law fee from First Boston.

The story is complex. It began in 1969 with an attempt by Chris-Craft to take over Piper Aircraft. This led to exhaustive litigation. The initial court decision showed that Chris-Craft had been the victim of SEC violations.

Chris-Craft filed a lawsuit against the alleged violators, among which was First Boston. The SEC entered the case "a friend of the court" on Chris-Craft's side. The record shows that Garrett at first supported the SEC position in favor of Chris-Craft and against First Boston.

Four months ago, a federal appellate court finally awarded Chris-Craft $25 million in damages and another $10 million in interest. This was a blow to First Boston, which might get stuck with paying most of the $35 million.

So First Boston sent its lawyers to Washington for a private conference with Garrett. He informed his fellow commissioners of the meeting, but he never mentioned that he had been paid a handsome fee by First Boston four years ago in a $50 million utility company stock issue.

Garrett also failed to notify Chris-Craft that he had met with their adversaries in the case. Nor did he invite Chris-Craft to present its side of the case.

Instead, the SEC, with Garrett playing a leading role, backed down from its previsous strong position and supported First Boston's petition for a rehearing. Garrett's new view was not accepted by the appellate court, but the court record is now headed for the Supreme Court, with no mention that the powerful SEC chairman might have a conflict of interest.

To Garrett's credit, he spoke to us frankly about his past association with First Boston. He said his lucrative work for First Boston in 1971 had completely slipped his mind. It was a one-shot thing, "a hello, good-bye situation," he said.

First Boston's president, Paul Miller, was also unaware of Garrett's previous role with his company. He was certain the company's lawyers also had no knowledge of it when they met with Garrett, Miller added.

A Chris-Craft spokesman said his firm had not been told of the ex parte meeting between Garrett and First Boston. He refused to comment on the case.

In A Nuclear Age – The Responsibility Of Power.

America's Secretary of Defense is the diametric opposite of the image of the trigger-happy militarist painted by our nation's enemies, critics and virtually all literaturs. Secretary Schlesinger is a profound and erudite scholar. I asked him – what of detente? Here is his answer written exclusively for this column.

By James R. Schlesinger
Secretary of Defense

WASHINGTON - Throughout our history we Americans have viewed military power ambivalenty, believeing that stability, not force, should characterize the relations between nations. Indeed, it remains our hope that nations can achieve their goals through cooperation rather than conflict. But we must not substitute illusion for hope. This world is neither one from which we can retreat, nor an abode we find particularly hospitable. Lacking the laws and institutions that shape the life of an individual nation, the external world has created far too many opportunities for the unrestrained use and abuse of power. Until the nations of the world agree upon and accept common purposes and institutions, it will be necessary for this nation to retain the instruments of military power for the preservation of the values it holds dear.

To become more precise about the existing distribution of world power, two nations, the United States and the Soviet Union, are preeminent. In a military sense, the world retains most of the trappings of bipolarity. Given that reality, the United States remains the indispensable counterweight to the unfettered exercise by the Soviet Union of its very considerable strength.

Americans have not been altogether happy with this development in terms of power and responsibility. They have been equivocal about American preeminence -- and the responsibilities such a position entails. Nevertheless, whether we are resigned to or cheerfully embrace these responsibilities, there is today no adequate substitute for the United States as the mainstay and maintainer of the community of free states.

In our relations with the other superpower we pursue both stability and a relaxation of tension. But given ideological differences and the contrast between our own social order and that of the Soviets, the reduction of tension cannot be quickly transformed into the elimination of tension.

The equation of power retains its ultimate significance. And it will do so until such time as the Soviet Union accepts the permanence and legitimacy of Western social order. When the Soviet Union ceases to regard peaceful coexistence – Lenin's phrase invariably employed in place of "detente" -- as something more than an altered form of the ideological struggle and a different phase of the class war, we may ultimately reach a common acceptance of the meaning of international stability. Until such time, however, power will remain the ultimate arbiter of international developments and the power balance will be essential to the preservation of stability. Detente willby necessity remain undergirded by an equilibrium of force.

Such are the realities which for the indefinite future will estabiish the framework for America's role. To a greater or lesser extent we can fail in our obligations, but it is not within our power to alter the hard cold facts.

Yet, we must also recognize that the psychological setting has altered since the United States inherited the responsibilities in the wake of World War II. Americans are no longer as enthusiastic about their international role as they were at the time of the Marshall Plan, or the founding of NATO, or the response to Sputnik, or the Kennedy inaugural address. Other states outside the Communist orbit no longer treat American leadership with acclaim. Familiarity has led them to become, at least, more restless, bored or unappreciative. So as we proceed on our course, we do so with less zest, with less of a crusading impulse -- while recognizing that the task has become, if anything, more difficult.

For some time the country has to all appearances been in flux. The changes in attitude reflect a widespread failure of moral stamina in Western societies as much as the specific disputes within this country over the Vietnam war. But I use the world "appearances" advisedly in order to stress the surface aspect of such developments. Beneath the surface there remains in the United States a deep-seated solidity. Despite the corrosive effects of the events of the last decade, our American society remains a highly resilient one -- perhaps preeminently so among the nations of the world.

But this deeper solidity can readily remain undiscerned. If there is one thing about the American society, it is a tendency to overdramatize. Headlines puffing the crisis of the week and the compression of reality in TV summaries serve to titillate the reader or the viewer. There is typically a quest for novelty.

There is, however, only limited opportunity for novelty in responsible policy towards the international order (or the domestic social framework). The role of the United States is to a large degree shaped by external forces to which we may react -- or fail to react. The zest for our international role may well have diminished, but that will not permit us to abandon our burdens. What Mr. Dooley said with respect to divorce on Ar-rchey Road many years ago has a certain relevancy today to America's continuing foreign involvement:

"Up here whin a married couple get to th' pint where tis impossibel f'r thim to go on living' together they go on livin' together."

I have every confidence that the years ahead will bring a restoration of moral stamina and an abiding trust in the values of Western citivilzation. The underlying strength and resiliency of this society is sufficient to the the task. We shall not fail, for if we should fail the inevitable drift would make the words of William Butler Yeats depressingly relevant to our condition:

"Things fall apart; the centre cannot hold;

"Mere anarchy is loosed upon the world, . . .

"The best lack all conviction, while the worse

"Are full of passionate intensity."

We ought not allow this grim vision to materialize.

High sugar prices caused by weather

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Federal Trade Commission says the last year's 400 per cent rise in raw sugar prices resulted from natural market forces, but warned its study was not exhaustive.

In a staff report released Tuesday, FTC economists acknowledged they had not conducted an "extensive inquiry" into possible industry acts to raise sugar prices artificially and cautioned against "conclusions regarding collusions in any segment of the industry."

The FTC economists said that the study was based upon industry, government and university data.

Based on those facts, the economists concluded that weather and past low prices combined to depress 1974 sugar production around the world, causing the price rise.

The FTC's bureau of economics said there is a need for "intensive investigation" of the industry's method of setting wholesale prices for refined sugar, which "can and does introduce some distortions and inequities into regional markets."

The FTC staff discounted theories that sugar prices soared last year because Congress dropped sugar price supports, because of Cost of Living Council regulations or because of an attempt by sugar exporting countries to restrict supplies.

Sugar prices have dropped for last year's high levels in recent months.

Careful plans will ease baby equipment budget

COLUMBIA—New parents can ease their budget worries by carefully selecting only what baby equipment they and their baby eally need.

Marilyn Blossom, child development specialist and Marilyn Caselman, home management specialist at the University of Missouri, make these suggestions for parents.

Electric food warmers are not really necessary. Few babies care what temperature their food is, though some object to food straight from the refrigerator or food so hot as to burn. Night lights are cute but unnecessary.

Babies that have frequent colds may improve if a vaporizor is used. Cool-mist models that atomize water and spray it into the air are best, safest and easiest to clean. They cost more than the steam-making models but they cost less to operate.

Babies need a safe, sturdy crib from the very beginning. Adjustable sides and mattress springs are very desirable features. Lightweight mesh cribs are not safe for an active older baby as they are easily tipped over.

When the baby is old enough, he will need a car seat. Used baby equipment is fine but a car seat should have been made after 1971 when the government safety regulations went into effect.

If you have stairs, you will need a gate at the top and the bottom to close them off from a creeping or walking child.

A bathinette is not essential. Many mothers prefer to bathe their babies in plastic dishpans on the cabinet next to the bathroom or kitchen sink.

An adjustable baby carrier is versatile and inexpensive. It's great for feeding time until the baby is old enough for a high chair. High chairs should be sturdy, easy to clean and have a seat belt.

A cheap substitute for a travel crib for a small baby is a cardboard box or a large basket with a sturdy bottom. It should be padded with towels and covered with a baby sheet.

Strollers are nice if you can afford one. Backpacks with lightweight aluminum frames will hold children from three months to three years old. Backpacks are less expensive than strollers and are certainly better than carrying a child in your arms for long periods of time.

Household hints

Sandwiches frozen ahead of time are good. the rest of the bag's contents cool. Take these out of the freezer in the morning, pack the lunch and the sandwiches should be thawed and ready to eat by noon. Freezing also preserves the freshness of bread. During thawing, keep sandwiches tightly wrapped to prevent condensation of moisture on the bread's surface.

Household hints

Soup and sandwiches have aleays been popular go-togethers. Place a hot dog along with your favorite soup in a thermos bottle. When lunch time rolls around, just remove the weiner from the hot container of soup and place on a prepared, packed bun. Pour the soup into the thermos cup. Presto, you have your basic hot lunch.

Women ask if possible to rape men at gunpoint

Dear Ann Landers: My friend and I debated this question for two hours and we couldn't agree on the answer. Please help.

Question: Is it possible for a woman to rape a man? My friend (female) claims it is not possible. I say it is. Granted, the woman might have to hold a gun to the man's head but I'm sure it could be done.

We have agreed to accept your decision as final. Please hurry. We'll be fighting over this until we hear. -- Hung Jury In Montoursville, Pa.

Dear Hung: According to Harry Busch, a distinguished criminal lawyer in Chicago, it is possible for a woman to rape a man, but highly improbable.

Nature designed humans in such a way that the male, in order to complete a sexual union, must desire sex -- or at least be willing to participate. While a male, at gunpoint, might be capable of being sexually aroused, it would be highly unlikely.

Somehow, somewhere, however, in this world of three billion people, there is undoubtedly a man who could manage it. So -- according to Harry Busch -- you win.

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell "Regrets in Ohio" that her story gave me the final prod to stop smoking. And I mean today.

For several months I told myself I was going to stop smoking "tomorrow" or "next week." The facts were, I really didn't enjoy smoking. I hated the smell and the mess. But it was the "Regrets" letter that stunned me into awareness. I sat down and asked myself, "Why am I continuing to indulge in a habit that is distasteful, dirty, expensive, and will kill me before my time?" The only answer that came to me was "You're the biggest fool I know."

I cut out the "Regrets" letter and am going to carry it with me. Every time I get the urge to smoke I will take it out and read it. I'll know it by heart soon. But that's okay. I plan to get a piggy bank to carry with me, and whenever I feel the urge to buy a pack of cigarettes, I'll put the money in the piggy bank. Six months from now I will double the amount I've saved and give it to the American Cancer Society.

I'll write again in six months (on February 15) to let you know how I did. I'll be ashamed if I have to report failure, but the idea that our dear friend in Ohio might see the letter will stiffen my resolve. -- Shaken In North Carolina -- The Heart of Tobacco-Land.

Dear Heart: Bravo, Baby! I'll be looking for your letter on February 15 and please know I am betting on YOU!

Dear Ann Landers: Please print this letter. I know there are plenty of readers who are confused and dying to know.

Recently I read your column in the News and Tribune (Edison, N.J.) hoping for advice on Love and Sex and How To Tell the Difference, but all I found was Love And Sex and How To Tell the Self-Addressed, Stamped, Envelope for 50 cents. I'll sign this letter -- Confused and Dying To Know In Edison.

Dear Ed: Obviously the Confidential at the foot of the column ran into the booklet note and the typesetter at the News and Tribune dropped a line. I hope you didn't die, because NOW you know!

Country not geared for nudity

By Erma Bombeck

Nudity just isn't catching on in this country.

Oh, I know you've all read stories about America's 5,000 miles of beaches dotted with bared bodies under the sun, but it ends there. And the reasons have nothing to do with modesty, prudery, or the law.

The simple truth is, nudity is impractical. Face it. We live in a wicker-chair- nine - months- of-winter- have- the correct-change- world. If you don't believe it, ask yourself: Would you hire a man who didn't have a pocket to carry his Social ecurity card in?

Would you date a man who had to carry his American Express card behind his ear?

Would you marry a man who checked into a motel without luggage?

Blending into the labor market has been tried by unclothed people and failed miserably. Some of them have turned to a life of crime only to experience more disappointment. Day after day you read stories of streaking bank robbers who are apprehended minutes after their get- away. It seems no matter how a person wearing only brown shoes and carrying a small black bag tries to "lose" himself in a crowd, he's always spotted.

A few unclothed persons have gotten temporary work by running across a football field during a game or appearing unexpectedly at awards ceremonies, but it's seasonal work.

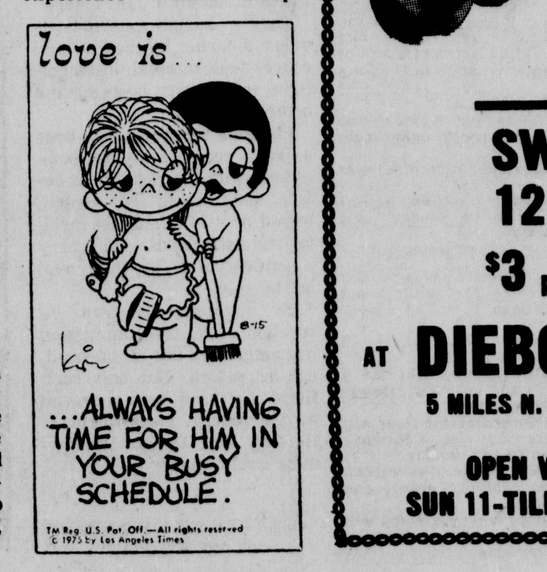

The country just isn't geared toward people who are unclothed. If we were to "go native" it would throw everything out of balance:

1. Turnstiles in supermarkets would have to be heated.
2. Pickpockets would starve.
3. Mr. Blackwell would have to amend his list and come out with the Ten Worst- Undressed Women In America.
4. Disney movies in which animals appeared with clothes on would have to have parental guidance and discretion.
5. Cher would have to wear puffed sleeves and cover her navel to get attention.
6. A common Band-Aid would be considered costume jewelry.

But worst of all, most of us would be greeted not with "How are you?" but "What Happened?"

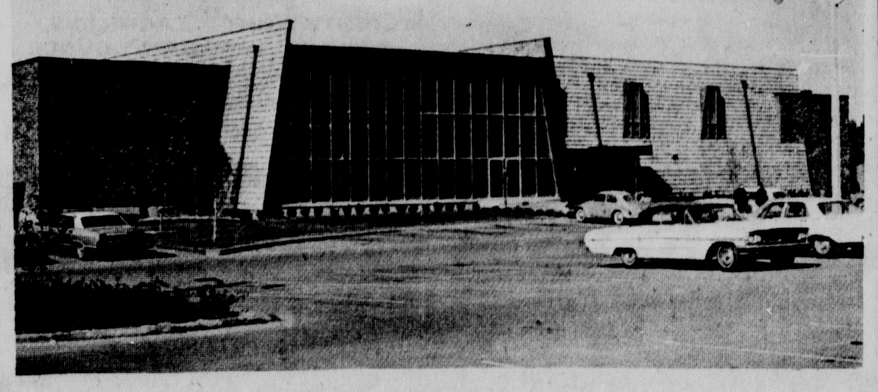

I couldn't stand that.

Thermos or vacuum bottles are great for keeping hot items "hot" and cold items "cold." Ensure their safety by washing thoroughly after each use.

"more spice than everything nice"

Wider opportunities

Maid of Cotton Kathryn Tenkhoff, 118 Thomas Drive, recently explained a unique part of her designer wardrobe, an Alaskan Kuspuk Mary Joe Bass, 902 Hawthorne Drive, holds to Senior Girl Scouts while at an agricultural tour stop in Columbus- Belmont battlefield Park near Clinton, Ky. In the top right photo, Sadhna Garg of Ambala Cantt, India, is surrounded by a Girl Scout troop from Clinton who acted as hosts and exhibited samples of Kentucky's farm crops as part of "The Missouri Bootheel Kicks," a national event sponsored by the Cotton Boll Girl Scout Council.

Senior Girl Scouts from the agriculture and heritage interest tour groups scramble aboard a ferry for a ride across the Mississippi River near Belmont. On the Kentucky side, the young women picniced, hiked and listened to Missouri's Maid of Cotton talk on cotton in Columbus-Belmont Battlefield Park near Clinton, Ky.

Women ask if possible to rape men at gunpoint

Dear Ann Landers: My friend and I debated this question for two hours and we couldn't agree on the answer. Please help.

Question: Is it possible for a woman to rape a man? My friend (female) claims it is not possible. I say it is. Granted, the woman might have to hold a gun to the man's head but I'm sure it could be done.

We have agreed to accept your decision as final. Please hurry. We'll be fighting over this until we hear. -- Hung Jury In Montoursville, Pa.

Dear Hung: According to Harry Busch, a distinguished criminal lawyer in Chicago, it is possible for a woman to rape a man, but highly improbable.

Nature designed humans in such a way that the male, in order to complete a sexual union, must desire sex -- or at least be willing to participate. While a male, at gunpoint, might be capable of being sexually aroused, it would be highly unlikely.

Somehow, somewhere, however, in this world of three billion people, there is undoubtedly a man who could manage it. So -- according to Harry Busch -- you win.

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell "Regrets in Ohio" that her story gave me the final prod to stop smoking. And I mean today.

For several months I told myself I was going to stop smoking "tomorrow" or "next week." The facts were, I really didn't enjoy smoking. I hated the smell and the mess. But it was the "Regrets" letter that stunned me into awareness. I sat down and asked myself, "Why am I continuing to indulge in a habit that is distasteful, dirty, expensive, and will kill me before my time?" The only answer that came to me was "You're the biggest fool I know."

I cut out the "Regrets" letter and am going to carry it with me. Every time I get the urge to smoke I will take it out and read it. I'll know it by heart soon. But that's okay. I plan to get a piggy bank to carry with me, and whenever I feel the urge to buy a pack of cigarettes, I'll put the money in the piggy bank. Six months from now I will double the amount I've saved and give it to the American Cancer Society.

I'll write again in six months (on February 15) to let you know how I did. I'll be ashamed if I have to report failure, but the idea that our dear friend in Ohio might see the letter will stiffen my resolve. -- Shaken In North Carolina -- The Heart of Tobacco-Land.

Dear Heart: Bravo, Baby! I'll be looking for your letter on February 15 and please know I am betting on YOU!

Dear Ann Landers: Please print this letter. I know there are plenty of readers who are confused and dying to know.

Recently I read your column in the News and Tribune (Edison, N.J.) hoping for advice on Love and Sex and How To Tell the Difference, but all I found was Love And Sex and How To Tell the Self-Addressed, Stamped, Envelope for 50 cents. I'll sign this letter -- Confused and Dying To Know In Edison.

Dear Ed: Obviously the Confidential at the foot of the column ran into the booklet note and the typesetter at the News and Tribune dropped a line. I hope you didn't die, because NOW you know!

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teen-Age Sex -- Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Country not geared for nudity

By Erma Bombeck

Nudity just isn't catching on in this country.

Oh, I know you've all read stories about America's 5,000 miles of beaches dotted with bared bodies under the sun, but it ends there. And the reasons have nothing to do with modesty, prudery, or the law.

The simple truth is, nudity is impractical. Face it. We live in a wicker-chair- nine - months- of-winter- have- the correct-change- world. If you don't believe it, ask yourself: Would you hire a man who didn't have a pocket to carry his Social ecurity card in?

Would you date a man who had to carry his American Express card behind his ear?

Would you marry a man who checked into a motel without luggage?

Blending into the labor market has been tried by unclothed people and failed miserably. Some of them have turned to a life of crime only to experience more disappointment. Day after day you read stories of streaking bank robbers who are apprehended minutes after their get- away. It seems no matter how a person wearing only brown shoes and carrying a small black bag tries to "lose" himself in a crowd, he's always spotted.

A few unclothed persons have gotten temporary work by running across a football field during a game or appearing unexpectedly at awards ceremonies, but it's seasonal work.

High sugar prices caused by weather

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Federal Trade Commission says the last year's 400 per cent rise in raw sugar prices resulted from natural market forces, but warned its study was not exhaustive.

In a staff report released Tuesday, FTC economists acknowledged they had not conducted an "extensive inquiry" into possible industry acts to raise sugar prices artificially and cautioned against "conclusions regarding collusions in any segment of the industry."

The FTC economists said that the study was based upon industry, government and university data.

Based on those facts, the economists concluded that weather and past low prices combined to depress 1974 sugar production around the world, causing the price rise.

The FTC's bureau of economics said there is a need for "intensive investigation" of the industry's method of setting wholesale prices for refined sugar, which "can and does introduce some distortions and inequities into regional markets."

The FTC staff discounted theories that sugar prices soared last year because Congress dropped sugar price supports, because of Cost of Living Council regulations or because of an attempt by sugar exporting countries to restrict supplies.

Sugar prices have dropped for last year's high levels in recent months.

Careful plans will ease baby equipment budget

COLUMBIA—New parents can ease their budget worries by carefully selecting only what baby equipment they and their baby eally need.

Marilyn Blossom, child development specialist and Marilyn Caselman, home management specialist at the University of Missouri, make these suggestions for parents.

Electric food warmers are not really necessary. Few babies care what temperature their food is, though some object to food straight from the refrigerator or food so hot as to burn. Night lights are cute but unnecessary.

Babies that have frequent colds may improve if a vaporizor is used. Cool-mist models that atomize water and spray it into the air are best, safest and easiest to clean. They cost more than the steam-making models but they cost less to operate.

Babies need a safe, sturdy crib from the very beginning. Adjustable sides and mattress springs are very desirable features. Lightweight mesh cribs are not safe for an active older baby as they are easily tipped over.

When the baby is old enough, he will need a car seat. Used baby equipment is fine but a car seat should have been made after 1971 when the government safety regulations went into effect.

If you have stairs, you will need a gate at the top and the bottom to close them off from a creeping or walking child.

A bathinette is not essential. Many mothers prefer to bathe their babies in plastic dishpans on the cabinet next to the bathroom or kitchen sink.

An adjustable baby carrier is versatile and inexpensive. It's great for feeding time until the baby is old enough for a high chair. High chairs should be sturdy, easy to clean and have a seat belt.

A cheap substitute for a travel crib for a small baby is a cardboard box or a large basket with a sturdy bottom. It should be padded with towels and covered with a baby sheet.

Strollers are nice if you can afford one. Backpacks with lightweight aluminum frames will hold children from three months to three years old. Backpacks are less expensive than strollers and are certainly better than carrying a child in your arms for long periods of time.

Household hints

Sandwiches frozen ahead of time are good. the rest of the bag's contents cool. Take these out of the freezer in the morning, pack the lunch and the sandwiches should be thawed and ready to eat by noon. Freezing also preserves the freshness of bread. During thawing, keep sandwiches tightly wrapped to prevent condensation of moisture on the bread's surface.

Household hints

Soup and sandwiches have aleays been popular go-togethers. Place a hot dog along with your favorite soup in a thermos bottle. When lunch time rolls around, just remove the weiner from the hot container of soup and place on a prepared, packed bun. Pour the soup into the thermos cup. Presto, you have your basic hot lunch.

Payments balance in black

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government reported today mixed developments in two measures used to keep track of money flows in and out of the United States.

The Commerce Department said the balance of payments as measured by the net liquidity balance showed a $1.2-billion surplus in the April-June quarter. But that represented a deterioration from the first quarter surplus of $2.9 billion.

Another balance of payments measure — the official reserve transactions — showed a $1.6-billion deficit. But that was an improvement from the $3.3-billion deficit in the first quarter.

The measures are two methods the government uses to keep track of money flow in and out of the country. However, both were designed to reflect pressure on the dollar in the ways when international financial affairs were governed by fixed exchange rates for currencies.

In the current system of floating exchange rates, the figures frequently are outdated, and the government is studying ways of revamping the statistics to provide more meaningful information.

The more highly regarded "basic" balance of payments figures are due out later this month.

The net liquidity balance measures short-term claims by private U.S. and foreign individuals and corporations on each other.

The official reserve transactions account keeps track of U.S. liabilities to official agencies, such as central banks.

Rules proposed for mobile home construction

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Rules governing the manufacture and sale of mobile homes and recreational vehicles that would require producers to meet construction codes have been proposed by the Missouri Public Service Commission.

The proposed regulations, which will be open to comment from the industry and general public, would apply to all mobile homes and recreational vehicles made after Jan. 1, 1974.

They include standards adopted earlier by the PSC and cover departmental investigations, inspections, licensing and complaints.

All units would have to bear a PSC seal certifying compliance with the regulations before they could be rented, leased or sold. Units not meeting state standards would carry a notification saying they could not be sold.

To augment its own inspection staff, the commission has authorized use of independent inspectors. But only such firms that have been approved by the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development could qualify.

State fair opens

SEDALIA, Mo. (AP) — Overcast skies and and intermittent drizzles quieted the opening of the Missouri State fair today.

It was drizzling when the gates opened at 7 a. m. The weather hadn't brightened much by mid-morning, but the crowd started picking up as the time approached for the opening quarterhorse races at 11 a.m.

The main opening events in the exhibit areas were at the sheep pavilion and the Holstein and Guernsey shows in the dairy cattle division.

It was the 73rd edition of the annual festival, and activities for 4-H and FFA youngsters dominate the 10-day showcase of Missouri agriculture. The program also provides entertainment shows, the traditional midway, educational exhibits and contests for the best livestock and household products.

State Fair director Jerry Hermann said this year's attendence is expected to be much better than last year. About 20,000 craft and agricultural exhibits will be on display and farmers will vie for nearly $500,000 in cash prizes.

Stage shows will feature such stars as Roger Miller, Charley Pride, Johnny Rodriguez, Donna Fargo and the Statler Brothers.

The week-long championship horse show competition will begin at 7 p.m. tonight. Horse racing is also scheduled for tonight and again on Aug. 20 and 22

The 22nd annual Missouri championship modified car races also start tonight. Other auto races are scheduled for Aug. 16, 17 and 22, with the grand championship late model stock car race to be held Aug. 23, and the I.M.C.A. sprint car races winding up the racing events Aug. 24 with the 21st annual Missouri Futurity.

The Missouri State Fair queen is to be crowned at 8 p.m. next Sunday. The tractor pull event will be held at 8 p.m. next Monday.

Harness racing is slated to start three days of competition at 1:30 p.m. Aug. 19 and will run through Aug. 21.

Missouri gasoline usage up

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Summer travel apparently maintained the increase in fuel consumption by Missouri motorists last month, boosting usage 2.5 per cent in July over the same month a year ago, figures released today by the state Department of Revenue showed.

The monthly figures showed that 242.1 million gallons of fuel were taxed by the department last month, compared to 236.1 million in July 1974. Usage, however, was down 3.8 million gallons from June.

July is the second month in a row that fuel consumption has been above 1974 levels, follwing three straight months of reduced usage from 1974.

The largest increase so far this year over 1974, when there were intense efforts to conserve, came in January when consumption was up 17.3 per cent.

The overall hike in usage this year has gradually declined since January with consumption at the end of July 3.1 per cent higher than for the first seven months of last year.

Payments balance in black

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government reported today mixed developments in two measures used to keep track of money flows in and out of the United States.

The Commerce Department said the balance of payments as measured by the net liquidity balance showed a $1.2-billion surplus in the April-June quarter. But that represented a deterioration from the first quarter surplus of $2.9 billion.

Another balance of payments measure — the official reserve transactions — showed a $1.6-billion deficit. But that was an improvement from the $3.3-billion deficit in the first quarter.

The measures are two methods the government uses to keep track of money flow in and out of the country. However, both were designed to reflect pressure on the dollar in the ways when international financial affairs were governed by fixed exchange rates for currencies.

In the current system of floating exchange rates, the figures frequently are outdated, and the government is studying ways of revamping the statistics to provide more meaningful information.

The more highly regarded "basic" balance of payments figures are due out later this month.

The net liquidity balance measures short-term claims by private U.S. and foreign individuals and corporations on each other.

The official reserve transactions account keeps track of U.S. liabilities to official agencies, such as central banks.

Rules proposed for mobile home construction

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Rules governing the manufacture and sale of mobile homes and recreational vehicles that would require producers to meet construction codes have been proposed by the Missouri Public Service Commission.

The proposed regulations, which will be open to comment from the industry and general public, would apply to all mobile homes and recreational vehicles made after Jan. 1, 1974.

They include standards adopted earlier by the PSC and cover departmental investigations, inspections, licensing and complaints.

All units would have to bear a PSC seal certifying compliance with the regulations before they could be rented, leased or sold. Units not meeting state standards would carry a notification saying they could not be sold.

To augment its own inspection staff, the commission has authorized use of independent inspectors. But only such firms that have been approved by the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development could qualify.

State fair opens

SEDALIA, Mo. (AP) — Overcast skies and and intermittent drizzles quieted the opening of the Missouri State fair today.

It was drizzling when the gates opened at 7 a. m. The weather hadn't brightened much by mid-morning, but the crowd started picking up as the time approached for the opening quarterhorse races at 11 a.m.

The main opening events in the exhibit areas were at the sheep pavilion and the Holstein and Guernsey shows in the dairy cattle division.

It was the 73rd edition of the annual festival, and activities for 4-H and FFA youngsters dominate the 10-day showcase of Missouri agriculture. The program also provides entertainment shows, the traditional midway, educational exhibits and contests for the best livestock and household products.

State Fair director Jerry Hermann said this year's attendence is expected to be much better than last year. About 20,000 craft and agricultural exhibits will be on display and farmers will vie for nearly $500,000 in cash prizes.

Stage shows will feature such stars as Roger Miller, Charley Pride, Johnny Rodriguez. Donna Fargo and the Statler Brothers.

The week-long championship horse show competition will begin at 7 p.m. tonight. Horse racing is also scheduled for tonight and again on Aug. 20 and 22

The 22nd annual Missouri championship modified car races also start tonight. Other auto races are scheduled for Aug. 16, 17 and 22, with the grand championship late model stock car race to be held Aug. 23, and the I.M.C.A. sprint car races winding up the racing events Aug. 24 with the 21st annual Missouri Futurity.

The Missouri State Fair queen is to be crowned at 8 p.m. next Sunday. The tractor pull event will be held at 8 p.m. next Monday.

Harness racing is slated to start three days of competition at 1:30 p.m. Aug. 19 and will run through Aug. 21.

Missouri gasoline usage up

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Summer travel apparently maintained the increase in fuel consumption by Missouri motorists last month, boosting usage 2.5 per cent in July over the same month a year ago, figures released today by the state Department of Revenue showed.

The monthly figures showed that 242.1 million gallons of fuel were taxed by the department last month, compared to 236.1 million in July 1974. Usage, however, was down 3.8 million gallons from June.

July is the second month in a row that fuel consumption has been above 1974 levels, follwing three straight months of reduced usage from 1974.

The largest increase so far this year over 1974, when there were intense efforts to conserve, came in January when consumption was up 17.3 per cent.

The overall hike in usage this year has gradually declined since January with consumption at the end of July 3.1 per cent higher than for the first seven months of last year.

Moderate Lutheran group rejects split

CHICAGO (AP) — A split within the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod would be "like a child running away from home," says a district president. But he adds in an apparent warning, "There are times when you are driven out."

Paul Jacobs, district president of the California and Nevada area, made the comments Wednesday at a meeting of Evangelical Lutherans in Mission (ELIM), a moderate group formed two years ago to protest what it called repressive elements of synod leadership.

Jacobs joined seven other district presidents at a news conference in rejecting a split "at this point."

Instead, they said they might endorse a "parallel fellowship" within the synod if conservative resolutions passed at the church's Anaheim, Calif., convention last month were carried out.

The church has been threatened with division between conservatives, who insist on a literal interpretation of the Bible, and a moderate faction.

Earlier in the day, Jacobs read a two-page statement to the assembly that indicated support for a split in the synod that moderates say could involve more than one-fourth of its three million members.

The statement read in part, "We face sadly but confidently the situation in the synod which inevitably must force thousands of our people to choose between capitulation to ecclesiastical tyranny, utter chaos, or a return to the scriptural and confessional way of defining fellowship."

It also stressed the need to develop "alternative forms of fellowship consistent with our Lutheran principles ... if these objectives cannot be achieved within the fellowship of synod."

Jacobs said that leaving the problems of the synod behind would be "like a child who is running away from home. It's fine for the first two days, but what about the third day?

"But there are times when you are driven out, and that is a different story. Our friend Martin Luther could have told you the same thing — he didn't leave; he was driven out."

The statement, in response to resolutions approved at Anaheim which labeled ELIM activities as "divisive" and "schismatic," received lengthy applause from the assembly.

ELIM officials predicted that in the event of a split they could attract 1,500 congregations with 800,000 members.

The Missouri Synod claims 6,000 congregations with 3 million members. ELIM claims 60,000 members in 612 churches.

Artist devises family tree of Biblical lines

NEW YORK (AP) — Is it a timetable? An illustration of some intricate vascular or nervous system? A complex electrical wiring plan? A maze? No, it's a family tree. It traces the long, labyrinthine blood lines of the Bible.

An Oklahoma City artist, real estate dealer and Bible class teacher, puzzled by all those ancestries, "begats" and descendants recited profusely in the Scriptures, has put them all together in one, interstitched genealogical chart.

"It was like putting together some enormous jigsaw puzzle," says Mary Lou Farris. "But the parts fit, once you find where they belong."

The assembled pedigrees, printed on a big, 2-by-3-foot chart in a half-dozen colors, traces human descent through thousands of years of ancient Biblical origins, branches and connections from Adam and Eve to Jesus.

Altogether, the chart contains about 1,100 names, including both minor and major figures in the successive unfolding of the generations.

"The purpose is to enable people to see the whole picture instead of in just bits and pieces," Mrs. Farris said in a telephone interview. "It's to help them understand the Bible. You can't fully follow the action without knowing who the actors are."

Mrs. Farris, 49, who taught art for several years at Penn State University and the University of Florida and whose paintings have been exhibited in several cities, spent two years compiling the Biblical genealogy.

She said a check of a college class once brought out that students were familiar with more characters in the novel, "Gone With the Wind," than in the Bible, probably due partly to the fragmentary way in which the Bible is approached.

"It's usually consulted piecemeal, like an almanac, rather than read as a unitary, interlocking story," she said.

For that reason, she added, the many characters, their relationships, and how they are linked into the overall progression of events and human striving tends to get blurred and lost in episodic segments.

Noted baritone plans patriotic concert tonight

Baritone Paul McNutt will present a patriotic concert at 7:30 tonight in First Church of the Nazarene, Highway 61 North.

McNutt recently received a Freedom Foundation award for his patriotic concerts from Freedom Foundation of Valley Forge, Pa. Freedom Foundation was formed during the Eisenhower Administration to encourage patriotism and to further the ideals of freedom at the grass roots level of the nation.

McNutt felt there was a lack of patriotism in the nation and decided to do something about it. His main purpose in this concert is to remind Americans of their great heritage and to say thanks to all of the millions of ex-servicemen as well as to those presently serving in the armed forces.

McNutt has presented this concert over 250 times in all major cities in the nation, including a recent appearance in Constitution Hall at Washington, where the U.S. Navy Band played the prelude and Bill DuPrey of the Metropolitan Opera sang the Star Spangled Banner. McNutt was accompanied by Rudy Atwood, pianist of the Old-Fashioned Revival Hour, during his concert.

Rated one of the greatest voices of the church world, McNutt sings the grand classics of religious literature during the concert. Often concert goers comment that a concert by Paul McNutt is like attending a spiritual grand opera and having a fresh new religious experience.

During the last four years, he has been on the concert circuit circling the nation each year. He has several other concerts of renown: "The Psalms of David", "The Conversion of Saul of Tarsus" and "The Worlds of Jesus", as well as the patriotic concert.

McNutt holds a bachelor of arts degree in music, having studied at Cornish Conservatory in Seattle and in San Francisco. He saw military service in World War II and the Korean War, and has logged 3,600 hours flying time as a pilot.

He served as music director for 10 years in a local church and for 15 years was a full-time revival singer.

No. 200. Mordecai Saves King Ahasuerus

After King Ahasuerus had made Esther his queen instead of Vashti, he celebrated by feasting and merriment and the giving of gifts. Afterwards, he demanded a second bevy of beautiful girls, and by this time Mordecai had been appointed to an official post at the king's palace.

It came to pass that two of the king's chamberlains—Bigthan and Teresh, who were guards at the palace gate—plotted to assassinate Ahasuerus. However, Mordecai gained information about the plot of these angry men, and he passed the information on to Esther, who, in turn, informed the king, though she carefully gave Mordecai full credit for the discovery.

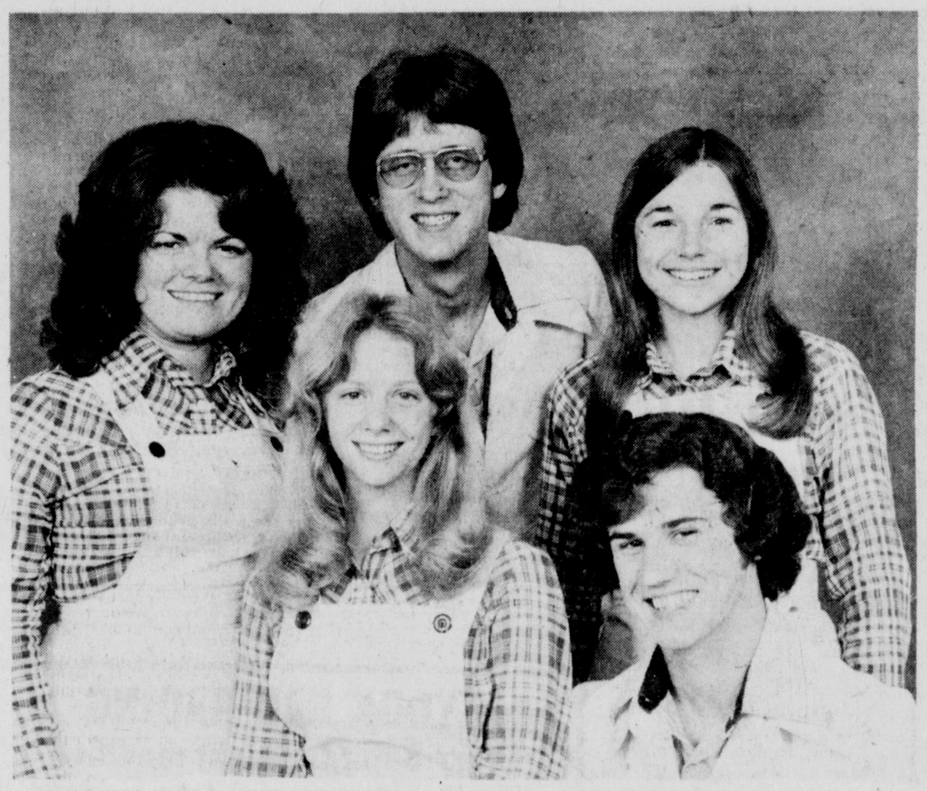

"And when inquisition was made of the matter, it was found out; therefore they were both hanged on a tree: and it was written in the book of the chronicles before the king." (Esther 2:23)

Moderate Lutheran group rejects split

CHICAGO (AP) — A split within the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod would be "like a child running away from home," says a district president. But he adds in an apparent warning, "There are times when you are driven out."

Paul Jacobs, district president of the California and Nevada area, made the comments Wednesday at a meeting of Evangelical Lutherans in Mission (ELIM), a moderate group formed two years ago to protest what it called repressive elements of synod leadership.

Jacobs joined seven other district presidents at a news conference in rejecting a split "at this point."

Instead, they said they might endorse a "parallel fellowship" within the synod if conservative resolutions passed at the church's Anaheim, Calif., convention last month were carried out.

The church has been threatened with division between conservatives, who insist on a literal interpretation of the Bible, and a moderate faction.

Earlier in the day, Jacobs read a two-page statement to the assembly that indicated support for a split in the synod that moderates say could involve more than one-fourth of its three million members.

The statement read in part, "We face sadly but confidently the situation in the synod which inevitably must force thousands of our people to choose between capitulation to ecclesiastical tyranny, utter chaos, or a return to the scriptural and confessional way of defining fellowship."

It also stressed the need to develop "alternative forms of fellowship consistent with our Lutheran principles ... if these objectives cannot be achieved within the fellowship of synod."

Jacobs said that leaving the problems of the synod behind would be "like a child who is running away from home. It's fine for the first two days, but what about the third day?

"But there are times when you are driven out, and that is a different story. Our friend Martin Luther could have told you the same thing — he didn't leave; he was driven out."

The statement, in response to resolutions approved at Anaheim which labeled ELIM activities as "divisive" and "schismatic," received lengthy applause from the assembly.

ELIM officials predicted that in the event of a split they could attract 1,500 congregations with 800,000 members.

The Missouri Synod claims 6,000 congregations with 3 million members. ELIM claims 60,000 members in 612 churches.

Artist devises family tree of Biblical lines

NEW YORK (AP) — Is it a timetable? An illustration of some intricate vascular or nervous system? A complex electrical wiring plan? A maze? No, it's a family tree. It traces the long, labyrinthine blood lines of the Bible.

An Oklahoma City artist, real estate dealer and Bible class teacher, puzzled by all those ancestries, "begats" and descendants recited profusely in the Scriptures, has put them all together in one, interstitched genealogical chart.

"It was like putting together some enormous jigsaw puzzle," says Mary Lou Farris. "But the parts fit, once you find where they belong."

The assembled pedigrees, printed on a big, 2-by-3-foot chart in a half-dozen colors, traces human descent through thousands of years of ancient Biblical origins, branches and connections from Adam and Eve to Jesus.

Altogether, the chart contains about 1,100 names, including both minor and major figures in the successive unfolding of the generations.

"The purpose is to enable people to see the whole picture instead of in just bits and pieces," Mrs. Farris said in a telephone interview. "It's to help them understand the Bible. You can't fully follow the action without knowing who the actors are."

Mrs. Farris, 49, who taught art for several years at Penn State University and the University of Florida and whose paintings have been exhibited in several cities, spent two years compiling the Biblical genealogy.

She said a check of a college class once brought out that students were familiar with more characters in the novel, "Gone With the Wind," than in the Bible, probably due partly to the fragmentary way in which the Bible is approached.

"It's usually consulted piecemeal, like an almanac, rather than read as a unitary, interlocking story," she said.

For that reason, she added, the many characters, their relationships, and how they are linked into the overall progression of events and human striving tends to get blurred and lost in episodic segments.

Noted baritone plans patriotic concert tonight

Baritone Paul McNutt will present a patriotic concert at 7:30 tonight in First Church of the Nazarene, Highway 61 North.

McNutt recently received a Freedom Foundation award for his patriotic concerts from Freedom Foundation of Valley Forge, Pa. Freedom Foundation was formed during the Eisenhower Administration to encourage patriotism and to further the ideals of freedom at the grass roots level of the nation.

McNutt felt there was a lack of patirotism in the nation and decided to do something about it. His main purpose in this concert is to remind Americans of their great heritage and to say thanks to all of the millions of ex-servicemen as well as to those presently serving in the armed forces.

McNutt has presented this concert over 250 times in all major cities in the nation, including a recent appearance in Constitution Hall at Washington, where the U.S. Navy Band played the prelude and Bill DuPrey of the Metropolitan Opera sang the Star Spangled Banner. McNutt was accompanied by Rudy Atwood, pianist of the Old-Fashioned Revival Hour, during his concert.

Rated one of the greatest voices of the church world, McNutt sings the grand classics of religious literature during the concert. Often concert goers comment that a concert by Paul McNutt is like attending a spiritual grand opera and having a fresh new religious experience.

During the last four years, he has been on the concert circuit circling the nation each year. He has several other concerts of renown: "The Psalms of David", "The Conversion of Saul of Tarsus" and "The Worlds of Jesus", as well as the patriotic concert.

McNutt holds a bachelor of arts degree in music, having studied at Cornish Conservatory in Seattle and in San Francisco. He saw military service in World War II and the Korean War, and has logged 3,600 hours flying time as a pilot.

He served as music director for 10 years in a local church and for 15 years was a full-time revival singer.

Dr. Lamb

Faintness in young women

DEAR DR. LAMB — Four of my friends and I have the same problem. We all have had second babies about eight months ago. We get light headed at times, which makes us nervous and that seems to make the light headedness worse. We all get little pains in the middle of our chests (which also seems very scarey). We have all been checked by our doctors. One doctor tells my friend it's muscular. Another says it's nerves and has put her on Valium and my doctor says it is exhaustion. I had an extremely difficult birth so he attributes it to that.

Although we feel there is nothing seriously wrong with us, we still worry about that weird feeling in our heads.

Is this common in young women? We are between the ages of 25 and 28. We are all very happy with our home lives but do wish we could feel like our old selves.

Could you shed some light on this subject for us? Sometimes I think we could be sympathizing with each other and therefore experience the same things. We really are in a quandry, but the more young women who've just had babies that we speak to the more we hear the same symptoms.

DEAR READER — You are describing a group of nonspecific symptoms that usually means enurocirculatory asthenia. What is that? A condition manifested by light headedness or faintness, sometimes breathlessness, sharp pains in the chest and sometimes irregular heartbeats, but there is no evidence of disease of the heart or lungs.

The set of symptoms occurs most often after an illness. One of the early descriptions of the symptoms was in soldiers of the Civil War, usually after periods of diarrhea or other illnesses. It also occurs in people who have low levels of physical fitness. During World War I it was noted in young men reporting to the army who had been office workers and were unaccustomed to much exercise. The rate of physical training was too fast for them, and they developed these symptoms.

The condition is related to anxiety and is often seen in anxious persons. The symptoms may be precipitated by more exercise than the person is capable of, hence it is correct to say exhaustion.

Why do you girls have this problem? Well, the long siege of pregnancy you had may have decreased your usual level of exercise tolerance. With children you have more daily responsibilities that could require more activity and cause more anxiety just coping with the household.

There are some things you can do about it. First eliminate those things in your life that increase anxiety. That means the coffee you are probably all drinking — the tea and colas too. The caffeine in these drinks has the opposite effect of tranquilizers and when used in excess leads to anxiosness that can contribute to your symptoms. You can use decaffeinated products.

Next start a regular fitness program of calisthenics to tighten up your muscles, including situps. And, you might form a group to do some morning or evening jogging. Start gradually and build up your tolerance. As your level of fitness improves you will have fewer of these symptoms.

Finally, stop smoking if you smoke. Cigarettes contribute to these types of symptoms. Now, I'll challenge you. Try this program for two months, then let me know how it works.

Send your questions to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. For more information on exercise send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents and ask for The Health Letter number 1-10, Exercise, Posture, Strength.

New variety series begins starring Dick Cavett

NEW YORK (AP) — Dick Cavett, a Nebraska lad who went to Yale and then Manhattan and never recovered from either, is starting his new four-week summer variety series on CBS this Saturday night.

His debut show features Liza Minnelli, Henry Gibson, magician Doug Henning and a "surprise guest star." I won't reveal the star's name, but it is neither Abbie Hoffman nor Judge Crater.

Cavett's hour-long opening salvo is uneven at best. Its main virtues are Steve Lawrence's nifty musicial arrangements, Miss Min elli's singing and the warm, pixie-like qualities she displays in a brief interview with the 37-year-old star.

Cavett starts off with a reasonably intelligent, mildly funny monologue. At one point, he goofs — maybe it was on the cue card — by thanking ABC for finding studio space for his show.

"Try CBS," an off-camera voice stage-whispers.

"Can we go back?" grins Cavett, who for five years had his own late-night talk show on ABC. "Maybe there's time to go back."

Later, the star, a frustrated magician, brings out Henning, star of Broadway's hit "Magic Show," for a quick touch of prestidigitation and a somewhat dragged-out experiment in ESP.

After a Minnelli song, ther's a telephone sketch with the "guest star" in which Cavett fails to get his dime's worth.

Henry Gibson, the "Laugh-In" poet who hit it big this year playing a rich country music singer in a flick about Nashville, checks in to sing a medley of songs from the movie, then disappears.

(Apparently Cavett only read the New York reviews of the movie and didn't realize Gibson can do more than rehash its songs.)

Then Cavett and series regular Leigh French do a sketch about talking to plants. The plants have the best lines.

The best moments in the show arrive in the last half, when Minnelli sings again, chats with Cavett and then all hands engage in an amazing saw-the-ladies-in-half bit with Henning.

The problems of this show seem to lie not in its stars, but in its nine writers, who include Cavett and Christopher Porterfield (a classmate of Cavett and coauthor of a book by Cavett about Cavett).

Their scrivening has sort of a this-is-what-amuses-our-crowd quality to it, the crowd being located in Southampton, Greenwich Village and the smart East Side of Manhattan.

But if it doesn't amuse the crowd west of the Hudson — at least the Nielsen crowd — Cavett's series will become just another example of why so few New York-produced evening TV shows make it these days.

Sikeston library lists new books

"The Golden Mistress", a novel by Basil Beyea, has been received at Sikeston Public Library, 221 N. Kingshighway.

The heroine of this romantic and compelling saga is a woman so beautiful, exciting, intelligent and passionate that she eventually captured the hearts of both Napoleon and Aaron Burr, becoming one of the most famous courtesans of her day — the notorious, scandalous and much-envied Madamoiselle Jumel, whose clothes, affairs and contempt for public opinion were the talk of New York in the early 19th century and whose past was a whispered mystery.

Other recent fiction additions include: "The Great Train Robbery", by Michael Crichton; 'Green, Green My Valley Now'", by Richard Llewellyn; "Tobias and the Angel", by Frank Yerby; "The Eagle Has Landed", by Jack Higgins; and "The Medici Guns", by Martin Woodhouse.

New non-fiction titles are: "If You Could See What IHear", by Tom Sullivan; "The Greenhouse", by Sidney Clapham; "Flic Story", by Roger Borniche; "The Battle of New Market", by William C. Davis; "Ivan the Terrible", by Robert Payne; and "Of Thee, Nevertheless, I Sing", by William Lee Miller.

What's the law?

The case of the faith-full spouse

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Alice and Bill had what many people might consider a normal marriage. They each had their own desires and they each had their own peculiarities. Bill liked a night out with the boys and Alice liked to change her mind. When she changed her faith, however, Bill insisted it was more of a change than he had bargained for and, packing his bags, he walked out on her.

Taking a dim view of her spouse's attitude, faith-full Alice sued Bill for a separation on the grounds of abandonment and for support.

"He just waltzed out on me," she complained in court, "and left me to face the music alone."

"And I had good reason," was Bill's answer. "When two people get married in the same faith, they agree, in effect, to continue to be married in that faith. By changing her religion, Alixe broke our marriage contract. Consequently, I had a right to leave and she can look to her new religion for support. . . and not me."

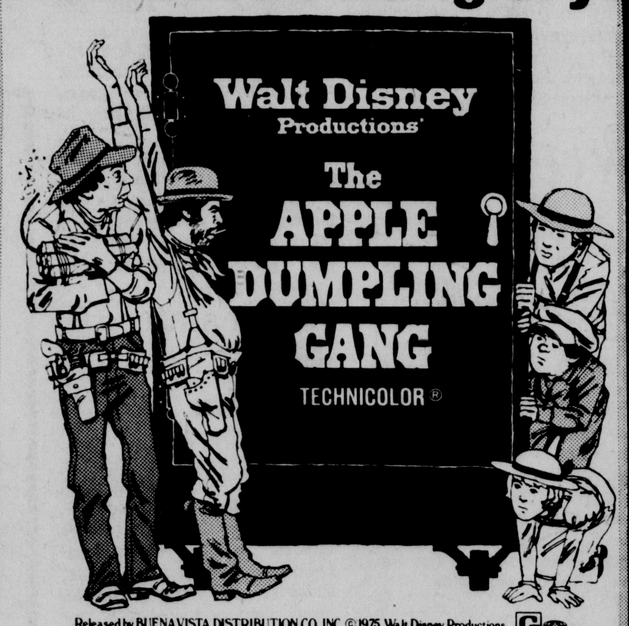

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you award faith-full Alice a separation and support from her recently departed spouse?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that diverse opinion is not a legal reason for a husband to leave a wife. The fundamental law of the land, noted the judge, guarantees freedom of religion.

Dr. Lamb

Faintness in young women

DEAR DR. LAMB — Four of my friends and I have the same problem. We all have had second babies about eight months ago. We get light headed at times, which makes us nervous and that seems to make the light headedness worse. We all get little pains in the middle of our chests (which also seems very scarey). We have all been checked by our doctors. One doctor tells my friend it's muscular. Another says it's nerves and has put her on Valium and my doctor says it is exhaustion. I had an extremely difficult birth so he attributes it to that.

Although we feel there is nothing seriously wrong with us, we still worry about that weird feeling in our heads.

Is this common in young women? We are between the ages of 25 and 28. We are all very happy with our home lives but do wish we could feel like our old selves.

Could you shed some light on this subject for us? Sometimes I think we could be sympathizing with each other and therefore experience the same things. We really are in a quandry, but the more young women who've just had babies that we speak to the more we hear the same symptoms.

DEAR READER — You are describing a group of nonspecific symptoms that usually means enurocirculatory asthenia. What is that? A condition manifested by light headedness or faintness, sometimes breathlessness, sharp pains in the chest and sometimes irregular heartbeats, but there is no evidence of disease of the heart or lungs.

The set of symptoms occurs most often after an illness. One of the early descriptions of the symptoms was in soldiers of the Civil War, usually after periods of diarrhea or other illnesses. It also occurs in people who have low levels of physical fitness. During World War I it was noted in young men reporting to the army who had been office workers and were unaccustomed to much exercise. The rate of physical training was too fast for them, and they developed these symptoms.

The condition is related to anxiety and is often seen in anxious persons. The symptoms may be precipitated by more exercise than the person is capable of, hence it is correct to say exhaustion.

Why do you girls have this problem? Well, the long siege of pregnancy you had may have decreased your usual level of exercise tolerance. With children you have more daily responsibilities that could require more activity and cause more anxiety just coping with the household.

There are some things you can do about it. First eliminate those things in your life that increase anxiety. That means the coffee you are probably all drinking — the tea and colas too. The caffeine in these drinks has the opposite effect of tranquilizers and when used in excess leads to anxiosness that can contribute to your symptoms. You can use decaffeinated products.

Next start a regular fitness program of calisthenics to tighten up your muscles, including situps. And, you might form a group to do some morning or evening jogging. Start gradually and build up your tolerance. As your level of fitness improves you will have fewer of these symptoms.

Finally, stop smoking if you smoke. Cigarettes contribute to these types of symptoms. Now, I'll challenge you. Try this program for two months, then let me know how it works.

Send your questions to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. For more information on exercise send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents and ask for The Health Letter number 1-10, Exercise, Posture, Strength.

New variety series begins starring Dick Cavett

NEW YORK (AP) — Dick Cavett, a Nebraska lad who went to Yale and then Manhattan and never recovered from either, is starting his new four-week summer variety series on CBS this Saturday night.

His debut show features Liza Minnelli, Henry Gibson, magician Doug Henning and a "surprise guest star." I won't reveal the star's name, but it is neither Abbie Hoffman nor Judge Crater.

Cavett's hour-long opening salvo is uneven at best. Its main virtues are Steve Lawrence's nifty musicial arrangements, Miss Min elli's singing and the warm, pixie-like qualities she displays in a brief interview with the 37-year-old star.

Cavett starts off with a reasonably intelligent, mildly funny monologue. At one point, he goofs — maybe it was on the cue card — by thanking ABC for finding studio space for his show.

"Try CBS," an off-camera voice stage-whispers.

"Can we go back?" grins Cavett, who for five years had his own late-night talk show on ABC. "Maybe there's time to go back."

Later, the star, a frustrated magician, brings out Henning, star of Broadway's hit "Magic Show," for a quick touch of prestidigitation and a somewhat dragged-out experiment in ESP.

After a Minnelli song, ther's a telephone sketch with the "guest star" in which Cavett fails to get his dime's worth.

Henry Gibson, the "Laugh-In" poet who hit it big this year playing a rich country music singer in a flick about Nashville, checks in to sing a medley of songs from the movie, then disappears.

(Apparently Cavett only read the New York reviews of the movie and didn't realize Gibson can do more than rehash its songs.)

Then Cavett and series regular Leigh French do a sketch about talking to plants. The plants have the best lines.

The best moments in the show arrive in the last half, when Minnelli sings again, chats with Cavett and then all hands engage in an amazing saw-the-ladies-in-half bit with Henning.

The problems of this show seem to lie not in its stars, but in its nine writers, who include Cavett and Christopher Porterfield (a classmate of Cavett and coauthor of a book by Cavett about Cavett).

Their scrivening has sort of a this-is-what-amuses-our-crowd quality to it, the crowd being located in Southampton, Greenwich Village and the smart East Side of Manhattan.

But if it doesn't amuse the crowd west of the Hudson — at least the Nielsen crowd — Cavett's series will become just another example of why so few New York-produced evening TV shows make it these days.

Sikeston library lists new books

"The Golden Mistress", a novel by Basil Beyea, has been received at Sikeston Public Library, 221 N. Kingshighway.

The heroine of this romantic and compelling saga is a woman so beautiful, exciting, intelligent and passionate that she eventually captured the hearts of both Napoleon and Aaron Burr, becoming one of the most famous courtesans of her day — the notorious, scandalous and much-envied Madamoiselle Jumel, whose clothes, affairs and contempt for public opinion were the talk of New York in the early 19th century and whose past was a whispered mystery.

Other recent fiction additions include: "The Great Train Robbery", by Michael Crichton; 'Green, Green My Valley Now'", by Richard Llewellyn; "Tobias and the Angel", by Frank Yerby; "The Eagle Has Landed", by Jack Higgins; and "The Medici Guns", by Martin Woodhouse.

New non-fiction titles are: "If You Could See What IHear", by Tom Sullivan; "The Greenhouse", by Sidney Clapham; "Flic Story", by Roger Borniche; "The Battle of New Market", by William C. Davis; "Ivan the Terrible", by Robert Payne; and "Of Thee, Nevertheless, I Sing", by William Lee Miller.

What's the law?

The case of the faith-full spouse

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Alice and Bill had what many people might consider a normal marriage. They each had their own desires and they each had their own peculiarities. Bill liked a night out with the boys and Alice liked to change her mind. When she changed her faith, however, Bill insisted it was more of a change than he had bargained for and, packing his bags, he walked out on her.

Taking a dim view of her spouse's attitude, faith-full Alice sued Bill for a separation on the grounds of abandonment and for support.

"He just waltzed out on me," she complained in court, "and left me to face the music alone."

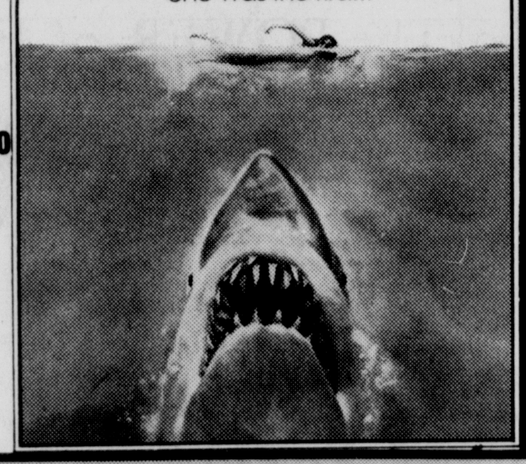

"And I had good reason," was Bill's answer. "When two people get married in the same faith, they agree, in effect, to continue to be married in that faith. By changing her religion, Alixe broke our marriage contract. Consequently, I had a right to leave and she can look to her new religion for support. . . and not me."

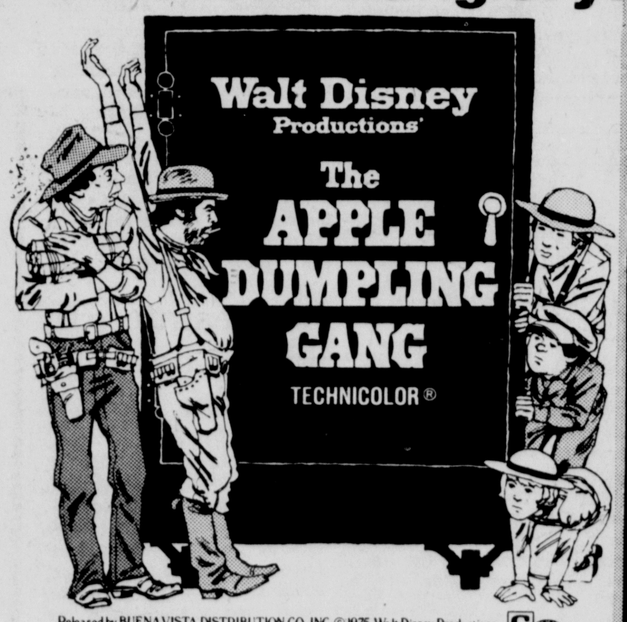

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you award faith-full Alice a separation and support from her recently departed spouse?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that diverse opinion is not a legal reason for a husband to leave a wife. The fundamental law of the land, noted the judge, guarantees freedom of religion.

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, August 15, the 227th day of 1975. There are 138 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1914, the Panama Canal officially was opened to traffic.

On this date:

In 1769, Napoleon Bonaparte was born on the Island of Corsica.

In 1935, humorist Will Rogers and aviator Wiley Post were killed in the crash of their airplane near Point Barrow, Alaska.

In 1944, the Allied invasion of southern France began in World War II.

In 1947, the independent states of India and Pakistan were created, ending two centuries of British rule.

In 1948, the independent Republic of Korea was proclaimed.

In 1961, East German workers began to build the Berlin Wall.

Ten years ago: Los Angeles authorities said they had gained the upper hand on the fifth day of rioting in the city's southwestern black district, although sporadic looting, sniping and armed conflict continued.

Five years ago: The avowed Communist, Angela Davis, was being sought on warrants charging murder and kidnaping in a courtroom raid in San Rafael, Calif., in which a judge and three other persons were killed.

One year ago: The 48-year-old wife of President 4Park Chung Hee of South Korea was killed in Seoul by an assassin's bullet evidently intended for her husband.

Today in U.S. History

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, August 15, the 227th day of 1975. There are 138 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1914, the Panama Canal officially was opened to traffic.

On this date:

In 1769, Napoleon Bonaparte was born on the Island of Corsica.

In 1935, humorist Will Rogers and aviator Wiley Post were killed in the crash of their airplane near Point Barrow, Alaska.

In 1944, the Allied invasion of southern France began in World War II.

In 1947, the independent states of India and Pakistan were created, ending two centuries of British rule.

In 1948, the independent Republic of Korea was proclaimed.

In 1961, East German workers began to build the Berlin Wall.

Ten years ago: Los Angeles authorities said they had gained the upper hand on the fifth day of rioting in the city's southwestern black district, although sporadic looting, sniping and armed conflict continued.

Five years ago: The avowed Communist, Angela Davis, was being sought on warrants charging murder and kidnaping in a courtroom raid in San Rafael, Calif., in which a judge and three other persons were killed.

One year ago: The 48-year-old wife of President 4Park Chung Hee of South Korea was killed in Seoul by an assassin's bullet evidently intended for her husband.

Coach predicts winning season

Sikeston High School head football Coach Terry Smith greeted the 1975 Bulldog squad Thursday evening with a somewhat optimistic view of the upcoming season.

Smith, usually very conservative in an estimation of his team, said "I'm optimistic about this season, I think it will be a winning season."

With ten returning lettermen, eight of which were starters, the Bulldogs will try to improve on a record most Sikeston fans don't like to talk about.

Defensively, the Bulldogs will have Ron Priday, Mike Bohanon, Bob Newman, David Shell, and Gary Griffin returning. Priday, Shell, and Griffin were defensive backs while Newman and Bohanon filled slots in the line.

Offensively, Sikeston will have Paul Gilbow, Fred Gilliland, and Wade Barber returning. Gilbow started as end and Gilliland and Barber played in the interior line.

Two non-starting returners, Paul Bean and James Wilder are expected to see their share of action in Bulldog games this season.

Priday and Gililand are the competitors for the quarterback duties this year. Priday started four games as quarterback last season and is a likely candidate for the job this season.

The purpose in Thursday's meeting was to collect insurance forms, medicals, and to set up training rules for the season. Team captains won't be selected until later in the summer. A watermelon feast topped the meeting.

This morning the Bulldogs ran a timed three mile and did over a hundred setups and pushups.

Smith believes Poplar Bluff will be the "team to beat" in the Northern Conference this season but "of course Cape is always tough and Charleston should be."

"I think all teams (Northern Conference) will be stronger this year, if any team will be weaker it would be Kennett because of a large loss of seniors due to graduation," added Smith.

David Smith, 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. David Smith, 730 Mimosa Drive, eats a cold slice of watermelon at the Doghouse following a pre-season pep talk by Sikeston High School football coach Terry Smith. Coach Smith said he expects the Bulldogs to have a winning season if all the team members learn to work together.

Cards stumble

ATLANTA (AP) — Dave May's memories of his American League playing days cost Lynn McGlothen and the St. Louis Cardinals a chance to inch a step closer in th National League East pennant battle.

May's three-run homer in the first inning off McGlothen sent the Atlanta Braves off to a 6-4 triumph Thursday night and Vic Correll added a solo blast. The loss kept the Cardinals 4½ games off the pace of division leader Pittsburgh, which also lost.

"I remember hitting against McGlothen when we were both in the American League," said May who came to the Braves in the Hank Aaron trade with Milwaukee over the winter.

"He (McGlothen) pitched me the same way he did then, so I had some idea of what to expect," said May.

May's recollections paid immediate dividends in the opening inning after St. Louis took a 1-0 lead on Willie Davis' solo homer off winner Phil Niekro, 12-10.

After Rowland Office and Rob Belloir singled, May connected for his seventh home run, a blast over the right field fence.

Correll cracked his 10th in the fourth and Office added a run-scoring hit later in the inning for Atlanta. The Braves also scored an unearned run off McGlothen, 12-9, in the third. The former Boston Red Sox right-hander was knocked out in the Atlanta fourth after Niekro tripled. Office then followed with his single off reliever Bob Reynolds.

Niekro, who lasted into the seventh, was relieved by Max Leon and Ray Sadecki after allowing 11 hits.

"I couldn't find my speed for my knuckleball," said Neikro, "so I had to go with my other stuff."

The victory was the first for the Braves over the Cardinals at Atlanta Stadium after dropping four straight to St. Louis.

"I have to worry about the Braves," said St. Louis Manager Red Schoendienst. "I can't worry about Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. The Braves always score a lot of runs against us in this park."

After Rowland Office and Rob Belloir singled, May connected for his seventh home run, a blast over the right field fence.

Correll cracked his 10th in the fourth and Office added a run-scoring hit later in the inning for Atlanta. The Braves also scored an unearned run off McGlothen, 12-9, in the third. The former Boston Red Sox right-hander was knocked out in the Atlanta fourth after Niekro tripled. Office then followed with his single off reliever Bob Reynolds.

Niekro, who lasted into the seventh, was relieved by Max Leon and Ray Sadecki after allowing 11 hits.

"I couldn't find my speed for my knuckleball," said Neikro, "so I had to go with my other stuff."

The victory was the first for the Braves over the Cardinals at Atlanta Stadium after dropping four straight to St. Louis.

"I have to worry about the Braves," said St. Louis Manager Red Schoendienst. "I can't worry about Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. The Braves always score a lot of runs against us in this park."

Bond seeking further LSD investigation

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Christopher S. Bond has asked the state Department of Mental Health and the University of Missouri to take another look at the circumstances surrounding human drug experimentation at the Missouri Institute of Psychiatry in the late 1960s and early 1970s.

Perry Roberts, an aide to the governor, said both mental health Director Harold Robb and University President C. Brice Ratchford were being sent the requests following renewed accusations of abuses during LSD experiments on humans conducted by Dr. Amedeo Marrazzi.

The U.S. Justice Department is reportedly investigating Marrazzi's Air Force-financed research at three locations including MIP over a nine-year period, but Marrazzi said he has not yet been contacted about the inquiry.

Marrazzi, 70, who is retiring from MIP at the end of this month to become chief of neuropharmacology at the Detroit Institute of Psychiatry, has also surrendered his federal authorization to use certain experimental drugs in human research.

The governor had made a request for an ivestigation of alleged abuses at MIP last year after receiving petitions seeking the inquiry. Although Roberts said the claims were not substantiated at that time, no official report of those results was ever made to Bond.

He said the two officials would be asked to make an official report on that initial inquiry as well as take a second look into the matter.

During the period of Marrazzi's research between 1969 and 1972, MIP was under the joint control of the department and the university. It is now an arm of the university alone, and officials have said LSD experimentation ended at the facility in 1973.

The latest accusations are contained in a document provided Bond's office by the Missouri Church of Scientology, which has spearheaded efforts to investigate human drug research at the St. Louis facility.

The document, labeled as a sworn affidavit of a dimissed subordinate of Marrazzi, Dr. Hugh V. Angle, contains charges that proper patient consent forms were not obtained from research subjects until after the experiments were performed and that Marrazzi did not have the proper federal authorization to use LSD and had a "questionable source" of the drug.

"Unquestionably, I deny them," Marrazzi said of the allegations in a telephone interview from Detroit.

Angle, who is now an assistant professor of medicine psychology at Duke University said in an interview he provided the affidavit to the Church of Scientology "as background material."

"What needs to be done are certain things to be checked out through the actual documents at MIP," he said. "A lot of it was second hand, third hand, and I can only attest to the things that actually happened to me."

For that reason, he said the most effective way to get rid of the rats is by clearing the area of the brush cover and destroying their habitat. Poisoning might kill a few but would not be a permanent solution, he said.

The court agreed that the way things now stand, it is not a county problem because the area where the rats are located is on land owned by a railroad company and the Missouri State Highway Department. The court suggested that if someone is concerned about the rats, they should complain to the railroad firm or highway department.

If they then refuse to take action, then it might be a county problem, the court members said, but it will be hard to convince them to get the area cleaned up unless they get something in writing.

Capps said that if the health department were to notify the landowners and probably take care of the matter in a short time.

This course of action was suggested Thursday, but no definite action was taken. Taylor said that even though the investigation has been made, no decision has been made on control measures.

Court upholds ruling on election reform act

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Court of Appeals today upheld the Watergate-inspired Federal Election Reform Act in the face of a challenge by Sen. James Buckley and others.

Specifically, the court said Congress acted within its powers when it provided for public financing of presidential elections and strictly limited the amount of money that politicians may raise and spend in seeking election to any federal office.

The ruling was a rebuff for a conservative-liberal coalition which argued that the law favored incumbents and major party candidates and restricted free speech. Defenders of the law had argued before the eight-judge panel that unlimited money used to influence the outcome of an election is not the same as unlimited speech.

The court did rule one minor provision of the 1974 law unconstitutional. And it declined to rule one way or the other on a number of other provisions. But it upheld the fundamental thrust of the statute.

Under the law, contributors to political campaigns are allowed to give no more than $1,000 to any candidate in a single election and no more than $25,000 to all candidates.

The statute also provides over-all spending ceilings ranging from $70,000 for congressional race up to $20 million for presidential elections.

The public financing section upheld by the court provides for total taxpayer funding of the general presidential campaign — at the candidate's option — and a matching grant scheme for primaries. The limit for the general campaign is $20 million, with a lesser amount applied to primaries on a formula basis.

The ruling said:

"The court holds that Congress acted within its power when it determined that providing public funding for the three stages of the presidential selection process would advance the general welfare of the nation by reducing the reliance of presidential candidates on large contributors, thus reducing their influence on the outcome of elections and on the operation of government."

The court also said it found nothing wrong with the fact that the taxpayer is not allowed to determine which party gets the money when he designates $1 from his federal income tax for political campaigns.

"If the taxpayer wants to avoid any conception that some part of his tax money will benefit candidates he does not favor, then he can simply refrain from checking off his dollar for the fund," the court said.

Buckley, who won election in New York as a Conservative Party candidate but belongs to the Senate's Republican caucus, was joined in his protest to the court by former Democratic Sen. Eugene McCarthy of Minnesota, a liberal who is now sounding out prospects for a third-party run at the White House.

The court's decision sidestepped the issue of whether the new law's watchdog agency, the Federal Eelection Commission, is lawfully structured, but said it can continue its work until the issue is finally resolved.

Illmo-Scott City board of education discuss assessments

SCOTT CITY — Supt. J. A. Holmes reported to the Illmo-Scott City board of education Wednesday night that final information on the assessed valuation of the school district should be available from the county clerk's office by the Sept. 8 board meeting.

Holmes said it appears at this time that personal property assessment will be down by possibly five per cent since household furniture will not be assessed this year due to a change in state law.

Real estate valuation possibly will be up some, he said, because of a new law requiring all property to be assessed at 33 and one-third per cent instead of 30 per cent of total valuation.

The law requires that all taxing bodies must lower their tax rate when the assessed valuation of real estate or personal property rises 10 per cent or more so as to bring in substantially the same amount of money that would have been received before the rate was raised, he explained.

Schools, however, are not to lose any money as the result of a higher deduction to the State Foundation Program, he reported.

When the final assessed valuation is received prior to the next board meeting and it is learned that the valuation of the Illmo-Scott City R-1 School District has risen by 10 per cent or more, the school tax rate will be lowered some accordingly, he said.

Board members awarded contracts for milk and bread during the 1975-76 school year.

The Albrecht Dairy received the milk contract with a bid of 8.40 cents for one-half pint of grade A homogenized milk. Other bidders included: Farrar Dairy, 8.41 cents; Leible Dairy, 8.75 cents; and Prairie Farms, 8.49 cents.

Colonial Bakery was awarded the contract for all bread to be used by the district by submitting the lowest bids on the different types of bread products. Other bidders were Harts Bakery and Bunny Bakery.

Board members learned that the new addition will be ready for use at the beginning of this school year. The last major item needed for the addition was lockers, which have arrived and are now being installed.

Application for government aid to help construct a double tennis court has been approved by the regional office in Malden and forwarded to the state office, Supt. Holmes reported. The state office said the application will be reviewed in early fall as to whether or not final approval will be given.

Anticipated enrollment for all grades, kindergarten through 12th, is about 1,250 students, a slight increase over last year.

Girls participating in sports will receive physicals after schools starts, it was announced. The school will arrange for the physicals.

School also will be dismissed Feb. 23 for Washington's Birthday; March 11 and 12, district teachers meeting; March 19, parent-teacher conference day; and April 16-26, spring break.

Shrinking families force 'think small'

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The shrinking American family is forcing U.S. industry to "think small" to survive.

The Census Bureau reports that the size of the average U.S. household dipped below three persons in 1974 for the first time in history — the exact figure is 2.97 persons — and the trend toward small families is expected to continue.

Why?

—Women of child-bearing age claim they want smaller families. "When married women today are asked how many children they expect to have in their lifetime, those under 25 years old say they believe they will have just enough for zero population growth," the Census Bureau says.

—People are living longer and the elderly aren't moving in with their children. They keep their own homes or apartments.

—Young people are moving away from home after graduation from college. The child who used to stay home until marriage is leaving the nest earlier.

These people will still need the goods and services produced by industry. But they will need them in a different shape.

Smaller households mean smaller houses. Smaller automobiles. Smaller packages of food. Smaller appliances. Different types of entertainment and amusement.

Some of the changes are apparent already, caused, in part, by the pressure of recession. Rising gasoline prices and shrinking budgets have prompted Detroit to put new emphasis on the small car. "No-frills" houses provide a bright spot in an otherwise gloomy construction picture.

Investment counselor Jesse Siff says industry is going to have to change its thinking even further or get left behind.

Business and government spokesmen tend to discount reports of entire industries going out of business because of disappearing markets. particularly in the area of products designed for babies and children.

"There will be every bit as many infants, but they will be spread out over more households," said Herbert Zeltner, senior vice president of Kenyon & Eckhardt, Inc., a New York-based advertising agency.

The government has been studying changing buying habits in connection with its revision of the Consumer Price Index. The final index isn't due out until 1977, but a spokesman for the Bureau of Labor Statistics said preliminary findings indicate "people are buying the same things they always did, but in different proportions. It's a gradual change."

Here is a look at what that gradual change might mean to some key industries:

HOUSING

Most of the experts agree that houses will get smaller for several reasons. Building and land costs have skyrocketed. More women entering the work force have neither the time nor the desire to take care of a large house. Smaller families need less space.

Zeltner said the living space of the future may be the cluster home, with a group of individually owned houses sharing common walls and some appliances in an extension of the current townhouse facility. "Why should each family have the expense of a complete kitchen and laundry unit?" Zeltner said, suggesting instead that homes of the future might have small kitchen appliances, washers and dryers and share large ovens and cleaning facilities.

Siff said there will be an increasing use of new materials and new techniques — some of them adapted from research being done in connection with the space program to determine the effects of living at very close quarters.

Siff and others said they believed that the size of the average single-family home has peaked and will start to decline, but the American Homebuilders Association wasn't so sure.

Association economist Bob Sheehan said he believed the demand for the three-bedroom and larger home would continue. "Additional space is not all that expensive," he said. He said the people born in the postwar baby boom are just reaching their 30s. "They're getting married. They're having children."

AUTOMOBILES

Economists inside and outside the auto industry agree that the small car is here to stay. They are less certain about the fate of the large car.

Siff predicted that in 20 years, very large cars "will be an anachronism, maybe even a collector's item."

Norm Crandall, market research director of Ford Motor Co., said he believed large cars were here to stay. But he said that the cars would become "more fuel efficient and what we call more passenger efficient" by providing more interior space while cutting overall dimensions, a trend already apparent in some 1975 models.

While the smaller household will mean "the need for hauling bodies is reduced," rising incomes, due in part to more working wives and fewer family members to support, will increase the ability to pay, Crandall added.

FOOD

Rising food prices, the growing consumer movement and demands for natural ingredients already have put a dent in the convenience food industry. Zeltner said he believes there will be even more changes.

Until 1973, he said, there was a trend toward "hyper-convenience," the fancier and more expensive the better. The recession changed all that, he said, "and my guess is that long after the recession passes, the resistance will be built in. People won't spend huge amounts of money in return for a marginal increase in appeal."

Over $35 million paid to state unemployed

JEFFERSON CITY---Jobless Missourians received $35,662,814 in unemployment benefits during July—an increase of 21 per cent over June payments—under state and federal unemployment compensation law, according to the Missouri Department of Labor.

Department director Geoffrey McCarron said $23,175,788 was paid from the state unemployment insurance fund and $12,487,026 was federally funded. The more than $35 million compares with $29,424,204 paid in June and with $6,654,638 paid in July a year ago when only one-fourth as many unemployed workers were claiming benefits. About 140,000 received benefits last month.

Of this amount, $571,045 was distributed by the Sikeston office to the four-county area of Scott, Mississippi, New Madrid and Stoddard Counties.

The distribution included: Scott County, $206,143; Mississippi County, $103,634; New Madrid County, $108,094; Stoddard County, $153,174.

Extended benefits (EB) totaling $59,339 were paid during the month to unemployed workers whose regular benefits had expired. The costs of financing EB are shared equally by the federal government and the state unemployment insurance trust fund.

Under the federal supplemental benefit (FSB) program, benefits totaled $27,160 during July. The costs of the program, which provides lohger duration benefits to regular covered workers, are financed by the federal government.

Under the special unemployment assistance (SUA) program, $163,255 was paid in benefits. SUA payments, which go to jobless workers previously not covered by unemployment insurance, are funded federally.

The above programs are in addition to the regular benefits totaling $321,291.

The shrinking American family is forcing U.S. industry to "think small" to survive.

The Census Bureau reports that the size of the average U.S. household dipped below three persons in 1974 for the first time in history — the exact figure is 2.97 persons — and the trend toward small families is expected to continue.

Why?

—Women of child-bearing age claim they want smaller families. "When married women today are asked how many children they expect to have in their lifetime, those under 25 years old say they believe they will have just enough for zero population growth," the Census Bureau says.

—People are living longer and the elderly aren't moving in with their children. They keep their own homes or apartments.

—Young people are moving away from home after graduation from college. The child who used to stay home until marriage is leaving the nest earlier.

These people will still need the goods and services produced by industry. But they will need them in a different shape.

Smaller households mean smaller houses. Smaller automobiles. Smaller packages of food. Smaller appliances. Different types of entertainment and amusement.

Some of the changes are apparent already, caused, in part, by the pressure of recession. Rising gasoline prices and shrinking budgets have prompted Detroit to put new emphasis on the small car. "No-frills" houses provide a bright spot in an otherwise gloomy construction picture.

Investment counselor Jesse Siff says industry is going to have to change its thinking even further or get left behind.

Business and government spokesmen tend to discount reports of entire industries going out of business because of disappearing markets, particularly in the area of products designed for babies and children.

"There will be every bit as many infants, but they will be spread out over more households," said Herbert Zeltner, senior vice president of Kenyon & Eckhardt, Inc., a New York-based advertising agency.

The government has been studying changing buying habits in connection with its revision of the Consumer Price Index. The final index isn't due out until 1977, but a spokesman for the Bureau of Labor Statistics said preliminary findings indicate "people are buying the same things they always did, but in different proportions. It's a gradual change."

Here is a look at what that gradual change might mean to some key industries:

HOUSING

Most of the experts agree that houses will get smaller for several reasons. Building and land costs have skyrocketed. More women entering the work force have neither the time nor the desire to take care of a large house. Smaller families need less space.

Zeltner said the living space of the future may be the cluster home, with a group of individually owned houses sharing common walls and some appliances in an extension of the current townhouse facility. "Why should each family have the expense of a complete kitchen and laundry unit?" Zeltner said, suggesting instead that homes of the future might have small kitchen appliances, washers and dryers and share large ovens and cleaning facilities.

Siff said there will be an increasing use of new materials and new techniques — some of them adapted from research being done in connection with the space program to determine the effects of living at very close quarters.

Siff and others said they believed that the size of the average single-family home has peaked and will start to decline, but the American Homebuilders Association wasn't so sure.

Association economist Bob Sheehan said he believed the demand for the three-bedroom and larger home would continue. "Additional space is not all that expensive," he said. He said the people born in the postwar baby boom are just reaching their 30s. "They're getting married. They're having children."

AUTOMOBILES

Economists inside and outside the auto industry agree that the small car is here to stay. They are less certain about the fate of the large car.

Siff predicted that in 20 years, very large cars "will be an anachronism, maybe even a collector's item."

Norm Crandall, market research director of Ford Motor Co., said he believed large cars were here to stay. But he said that the cars would become "more fuel efficient and what we call more passenger efficient" by providing more interior space while cutting overall dimensions, a trend already apparent in some 1975 models.

While the smaller household will mean "the need for hauling bodies is reduced," rising incomes, due in part to more working wives and fewer family members to support, will increase the ability to pay, Crandall added.

FOOD

Rising food prices, the growing consumer movement and demands for natural ingredients already have put a dent in the convenience food industry. Zeltner said he believes there will be even more changes.

Until 1973, he said, there was a trend toward "hyper-convenience," the fancier and more expensive the better. The recession changed all that, he said, "and my guess is that long after the recession passes, the resistance will be built in. People won't spend huge amounts of money in return for a marginal increase in appeal."

Over $35 million paid to state unemployed

JEFFERSON CITY--Jobless Missourians received $35,662,814 in unemployment benefits during July—an increase of 21 per cent over June payments—under state and federal unemployment compensation law, according to the Missouri Department of Labor.

Department director Geoffrey McCarron said $23,175,788 was paid from the state unemployment insurance fund and $12,487,026 was federally funded. The more than $35 million compares with $29,424,204 paid in June and with $6,654,638 paid in July a year ago when only one-fourth as many unemployed workers were claiming benefits. About 140,000 received benefits last month.

Of this amount, $571,045 was distributed by the Sikeston office to the four-county area of Scott, Mississippi, New Madrid and Stoddard Counties.

The distribution included: Scott County, $206,143; Mississippi County, $103,634; New Madrid County, $108,094; Stoddard County, $153,174.

Extended benefits (EB) totaling $59,339 were paid during the month to unemployed workers whose regular benefits had expired. The costs of financing EB are shared equally by the federal government and the state unemployment insurance trust fund.

Under the federal supplemental benefit (FSB) program, benefits totaled $27,160 during July. The costs of the program, which provides lohger duration benefits to regular covered workers, are financed by the federal government.

Under the special unemployment assistance (SUA) program, $163,255 was paid in benefits. SUA payments, which go to jobless workers previously not covered by unemployment insurance, are funded federally.

The above programs are in addition to the regular benefits totaling $321,291.
